

Pigot & Co. Directory Extract 1822

Calne

Is a small, respectable, clean, and improving town, interestingly situated on a descent in a fine open country. Its chief supports are the clothing manufacture, which is carried on to a moderate extent, for so small a town, and the consequent interest it derives from its being a great thoroughfare, for coaches to Bath, Bristol, London, &c. It has a communication by water to London, Bath, and Bristol, by means of an arm of the Berkshire and Wiltshire canal, which comes up to the town and joins the Kennet and Avon. The parish church, is a very neat structure, with a beautiful tower, that contains a ring of eight bells and a set of chimes. This principal ornament of the town, has of late undergone considerable repairs, which adds to the beauty of the building and the comfort and convenience of its members. It exhibits two orders of architecture, Gothic and Norman. Here are also Alms Houses and two charity schools supported by voluntary contribution, and a Free Grammar School endowed in 1683, containing considerable messuages for educating seven classic and thirty English scholars, with exhibitions in Queen's College, Oxford. The town holds a Court of requests, every six weeks for the recovery of debts under 40s. It is a borough, and sends two members to parliament, the present are the Hon. Jas. Abercromby and Jas. Macdonald, esq. The population is about 2300 inhabitants; fairs, 6th of May and 29th of September, Market day is Tuesday.
