

Holloway's Ointment and Pills the Best Remedy to Cure Bad Legs

Eliza Dew, the wife of a farm servant, living at Dinton, near Salisbury, suffered for several months with a sore leg, the ulceration of which was so dreadfully obstinate, that it defied the skill of eminent medical men to abate its malignancy. When in its worst state she commenced using Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which soon produced favourable appearances, and by persevering in their use for a short period, she can now boast of a sound cure. There is no case, however obstinate, bad, or long-standing, but maybe cured by these admiral medicines.

(Nelson Examiner and New Zealand Chronicle, Vol XII. Issue 608, 29th October, 1853, page 7)

