

Memorial to Men of 1st Training Battalion, A.I.F. at Durrington Cemetery

The Memorial is to the men of the 1st Training Battalion, AIF who died on active service at Larkhill Camp. The Memorial is an obelisk made out of red granite located in Durrington Cemetery, Wiltshire, England, which is north-west of Durrington Village. The cemetery contains 252 war graves of which 141 are Australian. Most of the war graves are those of soldiers connected with the nearby Larkhill Camp. The Australian graves are to the right of a wall inscribed with the words "Their Name Liveth For Evermore".

A memorial to the men of the 1st Training Battalion, Australian Imperial Forces, has been erected at Durrington, near Amesbury. It takes the form of a massive obelisk and bases in rugged red Scotch granite, standing altogether 15ft. high.

(The Times, London - Monday 8 October, 1917)

(Photo by Dave Healing 2013)

(CWGC photo)

Durrington - Australian War Memorial (Photos by Ian King 2010)

To The Glory Of God
 And In Memory Of
 The Men Of The
 First Training Battn.
 Australian Imperial Forces
 Who Died
 On Active Service
 At Lark Hill

The Names:

Service No.	Rank	Name	Battalion	1917
6298	Pte.	W. Martyn	2nd	6 Jan.
6339	Pte.	V. Youl	3rd	8 Jan.
5219	Lce. Cpl.	J. Scheibel	4th	12 Jan.
7026	Pte.	H. G. Maynard	3rd	31 Jan.
6783	Pte.	D. J. Quinlan	4th	3 Feb.
6842	Pte.	C. H. Young	1st	8 Feb.
6266	Pte.	F. T. Johnson	1st	13 Feb.
6947	Pte.	K. W. Ayliffe	2nd	19 Feb.
6951	Pte.	A. C. Brander	3rd	20 Feb.
7001	Pte.	A. H. A. Lehman	1st	24 Feb.
4146	Pte.	V. R. Baker	2nd	6 May
696	Cpl.	S. Williamson	4th	10 May
7308	Pte.	G. B. Rogers	1st	2 June

( OPC Note: 7001 should be Lehmann & Date of Death inscribed is not necessarily correct in some cases)