

John Tucker

Classical, Commercial, Mathematical, & French Academy,

IMBER, NEAR HEYTESBURY, WILTS,

Conducted by Mr. TUCKER, Author of the Philosophical Catechism.

GRATEFUL for the almost unexampled confidence with which he has been favoured during the many years he has resided in Wiltshire, Mr. T. begs to inform his Friends and the Public generally, that the business of his SCHOOL will be resumed on the 19th of July next.

This school is conducted on the Madras System – a system which needs only to be seen in operation to be preferred. – The Conductor presumes that, on the score of eligibility, the situation of Imber possesses claims peculiarly prominent.

IMBER is a sequestered village, on the Wiltshire Downs, four miles from Heytesbury, six from Warminster, ten from Devizes, and sixteen from Salisbury; and if isolation and retirement be desirable circumstances for a Scholastic Establishment, Imber possesses those recommendations in an eminent degree. The Mansion is large and commodious, and the surrounding lawns afford the pupils ample scope for recreation and exercise. The fact of the aid of any medical gentleman not having been necessary, but with one exception, during the last nine years, is a sufficient proof of the salubrity of the situation. The number of pupils has generally averaged about forty.

Terms moderate.

Salisbury and Winchester Journal, 21 June 1830