SALISBURY, OLD SARUM AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.— Salisbury or New Sarum is a large and ancient city, the See of a Bishop, 81 miles from the Metropolis; situate in a valley, near the conflux of three rivers, the Avon, the Nadder and the Willey. The erection of this city arose from the seizure of the castle, at Old Sarum, by King Stephen, which ever had formed a part of the possessions of the church; and a removal had been projected by Bishop Herbert Pauper in the reign of Richard I, which was not carried into execution till the time of Henry III, when the present Cathedral was begun by Bishop Richard Poore, which in the end occasioned the total removal of the inhabitants. The present appearance of Salisbury, if not elegant, may be considered as approaching to “the handsome;” its general aspect is neat, its streets remarkably clean and regular, and the principal ones possess the peculiar & pleasant advantage of having a stream of water run through them – a great comfort and convenience to the inhabitants. The municipal government is vested in a mayor, recorder, deputy-recorder, 24 aldermen 10 of whom, besides the mayor, recorder and deputy-recorder, and mayor for the year preceding, are justices of the peace, 30 common councilmen, and a town-clerk; the Earl of Pembroke is lord high steward of the city, and the Earl of Radnor recorder. Courts of assize are held here twice a year, sessions for the city as often as may be deemed necessary, and for the county every Easter; there is also a court which holds pleas of debt or land, called the ‘Court of record of pleas of the Bishop of Sarum,’ held in the town-hall the first Saturday in every month. This city sends two members to parliament, under a charter granted by the first Edward, in the 23rd of his reign, when the right of voting was vested in the corporation, consisting of 52 members; the mayor is the recruiting officer, and the present representatives are the Hon. Capt. Duncombe Pleydell Bouverie, and Wadham Wyndham, Esquire. The manufactures of Salisbury were at one period important and various, consisting of cutlery and steel goods, fine flannels, woolen serges, kerseymeres, figured woolens for waistcoats, &c.; but nearly all these branches have become extinct, - its commerce now being but of a character chiefly retail and domestic, and applying the neighbouring country and smaller towns with the various shop-commodities: its general trade has been benefited since the construction of the canal, which opened a communication with the part of Southampton; but not in extent equivalent to the loss of its manufacturers.

Exclusive of the Cathedral, the other edifices for divine worship, and for charity, the Council-house may be noticed as the chief public building that ornaments this city: it is situate in the south-east corner of the market-place – was began in the year 1788, and completed in 1795; it was erected at the expense of the present Earl of Radnor, recorder of the city, who made this munificent present to the corporation. It is a square building, with a grand Doric portico at the entrance to the two courts of law on the west side. The principal entrance is on the north side, by a flight of stone steps. The building consists only one floor, on which are two courts, and other suitable offices and apartments. The county gaol, Fisherton, is a strong and commodious edifice, built in 1822, and cost between £28,000 and £30,000, for 70 prisoners, but will hold double that in number. The amusement of the inhabitants is sought in a neat theatre, open during the winter months; concerts and balls at the same season of the year, and horse-races in the summer – a most respectably attended meeting, which generally continues for three days. The press of Salisbury issues a newspaper, which is published every Sunday by Messrs. Brodie, entitled “The Salisbury and Winchester Journal;” a print of extensive circulation, and that has long sustained the character of a talented, spirited and impartial paper.

Of the places consecrated to divine worship, the CATHEDRAL, being the grand ornament of tis city, claims our first notice, It is an elegant, chaste and venerable pile, with a spire rising in the centre, erected in the year 1258, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary: the different styles of architecture which distinguish the spire, together with the higher part of the tower, from the rest of the structure, has often induced critical Judges of Gothic architecture to suspect that the spire was added to the tower at a period much posterior to the original building, but no probable conjecture has yet been offered to determine its proper age; the architecture of the present tower and its spire is quite in that style of building which began to be in fashion about the beginning of the 15th century. It is probably one of the most exquisite, regularly-built sanctuaries in the kingdom – and contains as many windows as there are days, as many marble shafts as there are hours, and as many doors as there are months in the year. Not many years since, this noble pile underwent a thorough repair, and the improvements in the choir are, perhaps, superior to the thing of the kind in Great Britain; the entrance is awfully striking, and the effects of the whole is considerably increased by its beautifully painted windows. From the centre of the roof, which is 116 feet high, rises a beautiful spire of freestone, the altitude of which is 410 feet from the ground, and esteemed the highest in the kingdom. The Right Rev. Thos. Burgess, D.D., is the present Lord Bishop. The 'Close,' forming a residence for the Bishop and Prebendaries, is a regular, spacious, and grand place of architecture. – Here the four other churches, in the city and suburbs, all of them handsome buildings; they are, St. Edmund's, the living of which is in the gift of the Bishop; St. Thomas's, in the presentation of the Dean and Chapter; St. Martin's of which Wadham Wyndham, Esq., is the patron; and Fisherton church, in the same gift as St. Edmund's. The dissenting places of worship are for Baptists, Independents, Wesleyan and primitive Methodists, Swedenborgians, and a chapter for Roman Catholics. The charitable institutions supported by the inhabitants of this most respectable city are numerous, and efficient in the benefits they dispense – the aged, sick and infirm poor feel their influence; and the instruction of youth engages a most liberal share of the attention of the benevolent. The first charity in consequence and utility is the infirmary, a large brick building, in the parish of Fisherton, erected in 1766; there are two lunatic asylums, one a Laverstock, the other at Fisherton, both humanely and ably conducted; there are, also, many sets of alms-houses and hospitals, some of which are very liberally endowed. The scholastic establishments comprise a city grammar-school, several parochial charity-schools, and others upon the national and Sunday plans. A mendacity society has been established some time with beneficial effects, and there are two well regulated workhouses. – Three miles south-east of Salisbury is 'Longford Castle,' the venerable seat of the Earl of Radnor, formerly a place of considerable strength; two miles east are the ruins of Clarendon Palace, rendered famous in the days of Henry II; and near Salisbury is "Wilton House;" the beautiful seat of the Earl of Pembroke.

The weekly markets are held of Tuesday and Saturday, and cattle-markets on every alternate Tuesday throughout the year. The fairs take place on the Tuesday after the 6th January, for cattle and woolen cloth; Whit Monday and Tuesday after Weyhill fair, for hops, cheese, &c. By the returns to parliament for 1821, the three parishes of the city, and the 'Close' liberty, contained together 8,763 inhabitants, and the parish of Fisherton Anger 1,253; total population of the city and suburbs, 10,016.

OLD SARUM, one mile from Salisbury, was originally a town or fortress of the Belgæ, and was apparently reduced by Vespasian. Its Roman appellation was Sorbiodunum, and it was one of the ten British cities admitted to the privileges of the Latian law; here, too, the Cathedral existed, previous to its removal to New Sarum. Of this celebrated place nothing now remains but its ruins which have a very august appearance, and its privilege of returning members to parliament, who are elected by the free-holders, being burgage-holders in number about seven of certain lands; the present members are James Alexander, Esquire, and the Right Hon. Stafford Canning.
