MARLBOROUGH

FORMERLY a Roman town, called Cunitio, derives its present name from its situation being seated at the foot of a marl or chalk hill. It is an ancient and respectable market-town, principally formed of one street called High-street, which has rather a singular effect the houses being very dissimilar in size and appearance, some built of wood, others of brick, and many in the ancient style, and on one side of the street are piazzas, where persons can promenade without detriment from the inclemency of the weather. The river Kennett, (which is here unnavigable) runs by this place and takes its rise a few miles from hence. Having no manufacturers here, the inhabitants depend chiefly on the market (Saturday) which is admitted to be one of the best in the West of England, being well supplied with corn, cheese and butcher's meat. Marlbro' being situated on the great western thoroughfare to London, Bath, &c. it herby gains considerable support. Its municipal government is vested in a mayor, two justices, a few select burgesses, a town clerk, &c. It is a borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament, the present representatives are the Hon. J. Wodehouse and Lord Brudenell. The town possesses many great and valuable privileges, has a national and an endowed grammar school. It is divided into two parishes, contains two churches, which are the principal ornaments of the town, and display several styles of architecture. There are also sanctuaries for dissenters; a council house, a house of corrections, with four courts, one of which is for females, and a building (formerly a castle) now converted into an inn, and bears the name of the "castle", the garden attached to the building, in which there are very pleasant walks, displays a great deal of beautiful and picturesque, indeed it is a moat eligible and highly respectable hotel. Sessions are held here in October for the county. Fairs 11th July, 22nd August and 23rd November. The population is about 3000.
