THE WILTS RECORD SOCIETY.

PRESIDENT :
THE LORD BISHOP OF SALISBURY.

The WILTS RECORD SOCIETY has been formed for the purpose of printing and circulating unpublished records, charters, or papers belonging to the County of Wilts.

Such documents are every year becoming more scarce, many are ruthlessly destroyed by the hands of those who do not know or appreciate their value, and all are slowly but steadily marred by the effacing fingers of time. To be of value it is not necessary that they should be drawn from the class of Registers or Records, indeed it is impossible to overestimate the light which an unimportant but authentic document may sometimes be able to throw on points of social life and manners or on the gradual development of national institutions. Such priceless finds as the Paston Letters may yet lie hidden in some old oaken coffer in Wilts. But whatever the nature of the record may be, it is clear that so long as it is unpublished it may be wholly lost by the most trivial accident, while as soon as it is circulated, even in the most limited edition, its existence is practically secured for all time. To take a very simple instance in illustration. The accounts of the churchwardens of SS. Edmund and Thomas Sarum were placed in the hands of Mr. Hatcher when he and Mr. Benson wrote the History of Salisbury for Hoare's Modern Wilts. Mr. Benson copied a large number of these accounts; many of the originals cannot now be found, and but for this transcript would have been totally lost. Besides those which are thus lost, many which were at that time comparatively perfect and could be easily copied, have now so perished in places as to be quite illegible.

These accounts will form the first volume of the Society's publications. They extend from 1443 onwards, and include also the accounts of the Stewards of the Fraternity of Jesus Mass in St. Edmund's from 1476 until the dissolution of the College of St. Edmund. The accounts were all carefully transcribed by the late Mr. Henry James Fowle Swayne from the original rolls and Journal Books; a Preface has been contributed by the Lord Bishop of Salisbury and an analytical introduction by Mr. Swayne's daughter, the late Mrs. C. R. Straton. The whole forms a volume of 400 pages royal octavo, and it is hardly possible to realize the richness of the original material which it contains. It will be ready for distribution to the members in the beginning of 1896.

It is hoped in a subsequent volume to produce among other things the Fabric Rolls of the Cathedral, which begin early in the fifteenth century, and are full of interest. They include a summary of money paid and received, including the oblations of the Fraternities of St. George and St. John the Evangelist, the Barber-Surgeons, the Carpenters, and Tanners. It is intended also to draw upon Chapter and Borough Records, the Charters of Abbeys, Hospitals and Chantries, the Records of Courts Leet, and especially upon the private muniment rooms of the County. Any information from Town Clerks or private custodians concerning original documents which are likely to contribute to local history, will be gratefully received by the Editor, E. Doran Webb, Esq., F.S.A., the Treasurers, Messrs. Pinckney, Bankers, Salisbury, or by the Secretary, C. R. Straton, Esq., West Lodge, Wilton, Salisbury.

PREFACE.

I was asked by the writer of the following admirable Introduction to prefix a few words of preface to it, as one who honoured and valued her late father, Henry James Fowle Swayne, both as a friend and a fellow-student of antiquity. I gladly gave my promise to do so having seen the text of the records which he had deciphered with such ability and accuracy, and at once perceiving the great interest of the material embraced in them. I remember also that my friend Mr. J. E. Nightingale, another ornament of Wilton and of the County and district, in a short obituary notice of Mr. Swayne observes with regret that he had printed very little of the material which his unwonted energy had brought together. He concludes with the following reference to the subject of this book:—"A few years ago Mr. Swayne made careful "copies of the Churchwardens' Accounts and Journal Books of the "Parish of S. Edmund, Salisbury. Some portions of these were "certainly printed, and it is much to be hoped that they will be found "complete for the Churchwardens' Accounts of S. Edmund's are amongst "the earliest and most interesting in England. They commence at the "unusually early date of 1443." (Salisbury Diocesan Gazette, 1892, p. 40). This volume not only fulfils Mr. Nightingale's wish, but adds to it similar records of S. Thomas' Parish, and a few other ancient documents.

It was a sad surprise to me to learn that the writer of the Introduction which follows had herself been called away from a life of great usefulness, and from the midst of a busy and happy home. I had not seen the Introduction until I heard of her death which took place in April last.

The filial piety which urged her to undertake the task has evidently been seconded by a more than ordinary share of the intelligence of her father in the matters of which the Introduction treats. Almost the only criticism which a student is likely to pass upon it is that it takes a little too much for granted that its readers will possess the same acquaintance with ancient manners and customs as the writer. An index or glossary, if it is possible to add one, will to a great extent supply what beginners may need.

Is it too much to hope that this volume may be the first of a series of Records relating to the County and Diocese, which should occupy the same sort of ground as that covered by the Hampshire and Somersetshire Record Societies in close proximity to us? We cannot always find capable editors in great numbers but I believe we possess, even with all our great losses, a sufficient supply.

INTRODUCTION.

By AMY MARY STRATON.

a The accounts of these parishes were transcribed and carefully collated by my father the late Mr. Henry James Fowle Swayne, who had arranged in his mind all the materials for an introduction to the volume in which they are contained. His unique knowledge of the subject would have enabled him to perform this task most satisfactorily, but unfortunately he did not leave behind a single pencil memorandum of what he had intended to say.

It is with great diffidence therefore that I have thrown together the following notes of what struck me as remarkable while engaged in preparing an index to the work; and I shall be amply repaid if they only serve to direct the attention of those who are more competent to explore it than I am, to the valuable mine of original material which lies hidden in these accounts.

For fifty two years preceding 1445 the Accounts of St. Edmund's had been engrossed in Latin on rolls of parchment, and transcribed in English into a book of paper called the Journal book of the Church, by Robert Teyvyns, Deacon of the Church, but the earliest account now existing belongs to the year 1443. From that date until the beginning of the eighteenth century the accounts are more or less complete, and they are often rendered more clear by the gloss which a corresponding Extract from the Journal Book supplies. There is also an Inventory of Vestments, Books, Plate, Relics, &c., possessed by the Church in 1472. Besides these the present volume contains a Real Composition relative to Tithes A.D. 1238; and a List of Briefs for various collections to "redeem captives in machines in Morocco," to assist refugees or sufferers from fire; to repair St. Paul's, London, and similar objects.

In addition to those of the Church itself there are the accounts of the Stewards of the Fraternity of Jesus Mass, in the Parish Church of St. Edmund, Sarum, from 1476 until the dissolution of the College in 1547. Then follow the accounts of the Churchwardens of St. Thomas, Sarum, sometimes called the Martyr, at others the Apostle. When in 1537 Thomas à Becket was declared by Henry VIII. to be no saint but a rebel, all his festivals were abolished and his name and image were erased; the patron saint of this church was then conveniently described as the Apostle. These accounts extend from 1545 to 1690 and are supplemented by notes from later accounts and from the Minutes of the Vestry. Some ancient documents relating to St. Edmund's, and a list of Churchwardens close the volume.

Mr. Benson fortunately made a transcript of many old Church accounts, and much of what he then copied has since been lost. The letter B marks material preserved in this way ; entries from the Journal Book are marked J.B. and from the Vestry Book V.B. The oldest Minute Book of St. Thomas's Vestry begins in 1594 and the extracts from it are marked A.V. ; it is called No. 1, Acts of the Vestry. Endorsements marked H. are by Mr. Hatcher the Historian of Salisbury, and the footnotes are all by Mr. Swayne.

It is unnecessary to refer to the value of the information contained in these accounts. The facts were all noted at the time as they occurred, and such notes are useful in so far as they are records of passing events, depicted with no attempt at artistic effect, but with the accuracy of detail and rugged truthfulness of a photograph. They indicate the passage from one phase of social development to another ; the variations in the price of material and labour ; the localities from which material was obtained at different periods ; the scarcity and value of money ; the debasement and depreciation of the currency ; the evolution of local government from the time when trade guilds were powerful ; the history of poor relief from its rise with the dissolution of the religious houses ; the early relationship between the Justices and the Parish authorities with regard to the relief of the poor ; the construction and maintenance of the Highways ; the provisions for public safety in case of fire, beginning with the Curfew and passing on to leathern buckets, hydrants and fire engines ; the establishment of workhouses ; and the growth of assessment and rating. They show too the various changes in the daily life and administration of the Church and "the things necessary to be provided" by the Churchwardens for its services, under varying forms of government. From this point of view alone these pages afford a graphic accompaniment to any volume of Church history. No less interesting is the passage of one source of Church revenue into another according to the form of religious teaching predominant at the time. There were certain expenses which had to be met by the churchwardens irrespective of what opinions were uppermost. When Hoktyde gatherings, Lights, and Indulgences ceased, other means had to be devised for raising the necessary income, until the complicated budgets of former times became ultimately simplified into fees and rating. The power possessed by the Ecclesiastical Courts is seen at first to extend to matters, such as the recovery of rates, that at a later date would have been made the subject of a civil suit ; and the way in which that power was exercised over each church by means of visitations at which presentments had to be made to the Archbishop, Bishop, or Sub-Dean is well exemplified in the churchwardens' accounts.

The Churchwardens or "Churchmen" were elected by the Vestry, sometimes called the Gentlemen of the vestry or Masters. In 1636 there is a note that the 'Minister' gives his consent to the election of one of the churchwardens and the sidemen chosen for the parish of St. Thomas. At St. Edmund's the earliest accounts run from St. John Baptist's day to the Epiphany, or from Shere Thursday to Shere Thursday, a cenā domini, the master's feast. At first three "supervisores fabricae" were chosen, and these were often re-elected ; but from 1468 there were two "ancient" churchwardens, "gardiani ecclesiae," whose duty it was to begin the reparation of the church at Easter "and not wait till the Winter," and two junior wardens, custodes bonorum et ornamentorum ecclesiae, who became the "ancients" in the second year of their office. In times of difficulty some of the "Council of the Vestry" assisted the Churchwardens in overlooking the repairs. At one time the Vestry stood adjourned from Friday to Friday until the repairs were finished. The Accounting Churchwarden, who held the purse, gave a Bond with two sureties that he would account to the Vestry for money received. After 1510 two churchwardens only were appointed, and the one who did not hold the purse became surety for the accounting churchwarden. In 1552 Richard Rudge died in his year of office; next year his co-churchwarden was re-elected and the practice was thenceforth resumed of serving two consecutive years, the first as junior and the second as senior warden. An honorary or extra churchwarden was chosen in 1653 to countenance and help forward the building of the tower. After 1662 four sidesmen were regularly appointed in each parish to assist the churchwardens as testes synodales at visitations and in other ways.

The Wardens had to keep "Bills of parcels of the church," from which the accounts were made up at Easter, and the office was not only onerous but often costly. In the event of loss from delay in collecting rates, or in making up the quarter book, the warden was held responsible. There were many other troublesome duties that devolved on the churchmen. In 1629 they had to note down those who were in receipt of relief, and if any were absent from church they had to withhold that week's pay. They had also to stand with a basin at the great door of the choir to receive alms from such as came forth from the communion; they had to stand at all the doors of the church with basins after the end of every sermon, at evening prayer, and also after marriages and christenings "of the better sort;" they had to wait for half an hour after evening prayer at the upper end of the aisle at the East end of the choir, to receive weekly and quarterly payments, instead of going from seat to seat during the service as they used to do.

It became the custom, therefore, when a parishioner was unable or unwilling to serve, to ask to be excused on payment of a fine to the parish, and the amount of the fine was decided in vestry "by the more voices," but it ranged from 20s. upwards. In 1675 it was resolved that no fine should be less than £5 except in special circumstances; thus when a churchman was "well inclined to do service" but unable "by failure of his eyes" his fine was reduced to £3 10s. The motives were not always so disinterested, and Vestrymen sometimes reduced the fine of a warden who had only served part of his time, "in consideration of his giving them a Treat" (241). Past churchwardens and those who had paid their fines were made members of the vestry. "Free gifts" of 20s. or upwards were usually made on the admission of fresh vestrymen. The vestry meetings were often held on Sunday after evening prayer.

The Wardens or Stewards of fraternities, chapels, and lights, rendered their accounts to the Masters in the same way as the Churchmen, but no mention is made of chantry wardens. The Parish Priest, presbyter, rector, minister, parson, or pastor was assisted by Chantry Capellani, a Deacon, or Assistant (241), and a Clerk, who was usually in minor orders. When the clerk acted as Sacristan he received additional pay for any duties he performed as such (123). If the rector were a preacher the clerk read morning prayers for a small additional sum (55). Acolytes had no fixed salary but received a coat or a pair of shoes for their services. At first when the organs were of a simple kind no regular Organist was employed; but later when more complicated instruments were in use an organist was engaged, and a Tuner came periodically or was sent for "to come and execute his office." Singing men were hired occasionally for a week or two, especially during a Pardon, or in Lent. On the Fridays during Lent singers came from the Cathedral to "syng at salve" (103), and were refreshed, as an old writer puts it, "with a scholastical and moderate congratulacion, but no superfluity or excess," of figs with bread and ale. In Wiltshire Smyrna figs are still often called Lent or Lamb figs, a name which otherwise would have been difficult to account for. The Sexton's duties lay outside the church although the same person occasionally acted as Sexton and Sacristan and even as Clerk "in the awbsence of the clerk through sickness" (82). The office of Sexton was at one time held by a woman (241), and was sometimes a yearly appointment (186). When required the sexton gave security (239) "to be true and faithfull in his place, and demeane himself as he ought, and to keep his house free from inmates and disorders." The 'mortuary stools' used at funerals were supplied by the sexton (244). He occasionally received a small extra payment for "going about the church" rousing adult sleepers, and a little more for "geydinge of the children." If he owned the long brushes used in "stryking down the wevet" he charged 10d. "for the hire of the buyssam" (291).

The ringers were most important officers in the early years of these accounts, when every important announcement was made from the church steeple.

Besides the officers of the church itself there was a steward of the scotale, who, like the churchwardens, was bound to serve when chosen, or pay a fine.

The duties of the church officers were also greatly increased by the custom of making everything that was wanted on the premises. When books were written, bound, and repaired, the skins and clasps had all to be bought and a scribe set to work; when vestments were made, the broderer was engaged to work up the blue damask with gold eagles, and the silk and crewels were all bought and charged for; crosses or candlesticks were repaired with broken silver from the treasury house; new wax was bought and worked up with the old; and the sows of lead that lay in the plummerie had all to be accounted for by the custos bonorum until used on the roof or gutters.

After 1670 two supervisors of the highways were also appointed annually.

The names of the auditors are occasionally mentioned, and on one occasion (297) five sign the list of sums due.

The accounts usually open with the balance in hand or "mony numbred of the store of the churche owte of the chest of the Tresory" (1478); this was handed over to the masters by the accountant with a list of arrears due. If the last accountant had not been discharged it was a question whether the new churchwarden could sue for these arrears, and a model opinion of counsel will be found on this point at page 352. The balance in the treasury was not always in current coin, but included "trasche money and galyhalfpens in a pors with odyr brokyn sylvyr," "a marc left from John a Dovers time," "a sum in French crowns;" and even the current coin had at times to be discounted "when the shilling came to ninepence" and "the groat to twopence." The balance was then handed over by the masters to the next churchwarden in the presence of the Mayor and others. A quire of paper was bought, 1476 (363) to enter the "parcels of the church," and "30 counters to lay the accounts with;" the auditors were rarely rapid accountants, and doubtless verified their reckonings on an exchequer or counting board.

The junior wardens or custodes bonorum et ornamentorum had an inventory of the property of the church, which they checked on assuming office. The inventory in use in 1472 is printed at page 3, and corrections will be found at p. 371. In the hands of the deacon were suits of vestments of various colours for the Christian seasons with palls or helynge for the altar. Besides these there were many other suits, one blue cope with the Passion in the Orfrayes was reputed to be that of St. Edmund; many of them were embroidered with eagles, branches, dogs, trefoils, escaloppys of puffe feathers, beasts and birds; and there were black suits for mortuaries. There were also palls for the sepulchre, with sheets of Rennes, veils for the high altar and rood; a mitre and Episcopal gloves are also enumerated, which may have been used by a Nicholas Bishop, but were more probably the mitre and gloves of St. Edmund, the founder of the College.

The Church Plate is carefully described, and included numerous chalices, patens, crosses, candlesticks, censers, incense boats, oilvats, cups, holywater vessels, sprinklers, pix, and an osculatorium of silver gilt representing the Crucifixion with Mary and John, mounted on a gospeller of vellum; as well as a copperen pax.

In the early ages of the church, Mass was celebrated on the tombs of the martyrs, hence arose the custom of depositing relics of Saints about the altar. At St. Edmund's there were Relics of S. Edmund's shirt, ring, and ivory comb; a relic of St. Edward's shirt; St. Dunstan's stole; and a piece of the skull of St. Wolfrise.

The Books and Manuscripts included missals, gossellers, epistlers, grayles, breviaries, antiphoners, legenda, psalters, collectaria, dirige, processionals, "Hugocon y chaynyd in our Lady Chapell," Life of the Saints, and a Book for the organs. The collation of the manuscripts is carefully given in the inventory so that the copies might still be traced.

From time to time printed books were bought, a Prymyr boke (366), Song book of the Psalms (74), Bibles (75), Psalters (89), Prayer book commanded by the King (152), Ordinals (89), Homily books (71), Book of Procession (284), Communion books (97), Book of the Pharasyres (103), or paraphrases of Erasmus. There were books issued for special occasions, Prayer Book for the King (320), for the Queen (296), for the Parliament (321), Book on the Earthquake (126), Book read during the great plague (183), during the dearth, Book of toleration (200), Book to be read once a year (232), Book to be read on Fasting days (206), Prayers the Aparator brought to be read (212), Book of Ordinances of Presbytryal government (219), Book from his Majesty for the better regulating of preachers (336), The King's letter (346), The King's Declaration (344), Books of Canons ecclesiastical (336), Books of Injunctions and of Articles of Visitations (146, 290), the Book of Martyrs chained in the church, and many others.

There were also paper books for prick songs (75), Register books of householders (134), of Christenings (132), of Banns (132), of Burials, of takers of the Sacrament (132, 326), of strange ministers (212, 343), of those buried in woollen (343).

Receipts.

The gatherings made at the church doors and in church on Good Friday, Easter eve, and Easter day, for the fabric and for church works, form generally the first item in the receipts; then come the sums received for the Font-taper and Fulling-taper. The collections "ad cerum fontis" were made on Shere Thursday, Easter eve, and Easter day throughout the year. The cost of wax for this taper is charged in the accounts and there is a (36) charge for making a font taper to be used "tempore grave infirmitatis." The "font taper and Deacon's wages" became one collection at St. Thomas's in 1548, and soon after the sum is entered as "Deacon's Wages and Halfpence at Easter," "Offerings and tithes at Easter," or the "Easter Book." In St. Edmund's the Font-taper goes on until 1589, when it becomes "The Hawpence" for Easter dues, and so continues till 1641, when it seems to have merged into the Quarter Book. A small sum is occasionally entered as Casualties, which was money collected from those who had received the communion but whose names were not in the Easter Book. The Pascal money was paid by the parishioners when they "took their rights," which meant confession, absolution, and communion at Easter. The Pascal taper was blessed on Easter eve, was kept lighted till Holy Thursday, and was lighted again at Whitsuntide. It was elevated on a large stock, and entries occur for drawing and dressing the stock, for draught, light, 30lb. wax to make the pascal, and for mending the case in which the taper was moulded. In 1491 there is a charge of one penny for coals to make holy fire on Easter eve: all lights were then quenched and fresh fire drawn from flint, and distributed by hallowed tapers. The Fulling taper was probably that in use at the purification of women, or it may have been the painted taper used at the feast of the Purification and symbolical of the "Light to lighten the Gentiles."

Besides the Font taper and Pascal there were other lights supported by collections made in church, or gathered by guilds and fraternities which had their own stewards or wardens. The Rood light was supported by the "devotion of the people" at Christmas (28), in front of it hung a trendel-wheel, and in Lent a stained veil of Osnaburg canvas.

In the Lady Chapel there were Altar lights. Within the choir there was a lamp supported by a confraternity having a 'proctor'; on the high altar were Perchers and Paris candles, "the taper before the Sacrament," and on Christmas day "two torches of rosom." Over the sepulchre at Easter a number of lights were fixed on pins of beech and ash. In the Nave there was a light "at the Image of the Cross with Mary and John painted and gilded with stars;" the Confraternity or Guild of Jesus Mass and the Holy Cross supported the Morrow Mass or Holy Cross Altar, over which there was a tablement: this mass was held at 6 a.m., and the accounts of the Confraternity are printed at page 248. There were besides "within the church" the Wife's Light (which was brought in by the waits on Candlemas day, the wives' feast day), the Lights of the Trinity, Maidens, Servants, of St. Christopher, and of St. James. There was a light for the visitation of the sick (36) and a lantern to carry (27) day or night with the Sacrament of the Altar. Mention is made of the Banner of St. Eustace, but not of a light. In the North Aisle was the Chapel of St. John Baptist with a light, and apparently in 1473 with a rood loft. There were chapels or altars dedicated to St. Nicholas, St. Fabian, St. Sebastian, St. Julian the Confessor, and St. Andrew. There was an altar to St. Lawrence with "grees" or steps in front and a 'sacring bell,' and there was a picture of St. Gregory with his three crowns. The Weavers' Guild had a chaplain who used the Morrow Mass altar. Besides the ceremonial tapers, there was an allowance for tallow candles "to say service by" in brumá. Many of the altars had a skob with a lock and key to hold their ornaments and books. In the cemetery was the Chapel of St. Catherine, which belonged to the adjoining College of St. Edmund and was alienated with it at its dissolution. It was supported by a charge on the living of Winterbourne Martin. Some of the lights were kept up by the hire of sheep given to support them (61—63). Under the title of Increases will be found entered the sums brought in by the various Confraternities or Guilds at their annual festivals. The stewards of each light received a certain sum as "stock," to be used in the best way they could in maintaining their light and promoting the success of their festival; after deducting the expenses incurred from what they had collected, and retaining 'stock' for next year, the balance or "increase" was brought in "to be hallowed," and given to the Churchwardens for Church works. The Weavers, Joiners, Bakers, Parchment Makers, Iremungers, and Shoemakers are among the crafts making offerings.

The Guild of St. George, which was founded in the time of Edward III., consisted of the 24 Aldermen and the 48 Councillors. It had its chapel festival on St. George's Day, when it carried "the Jorge harnysed" in procession to the Cathedral, to which it gave an oblation of 2½d. in 1474. Its priest had a seat at the Mayor's table.

Occasionally gatherings in kind appear to have been made. In 1482 a benevolence of lead was granted by the parishioners for roofing the church.

Oblations and devotions of divers people to the Church, were received because of the Indulgentia (or remission) of the Pope, his letters, of old time granted to the Church of St. Edmund. The pardons were at Michaelmas and the Annunciation, and on these occasions the Hand and Ring of St. Edmund (53) and other relics were exposed to the faithful making oblations. Six bills were written in English to declare the indulgence, and in 1471 a child was hired to keep the pardon at the Annunciation, and Robert Glasyer to keep it at Michaelmas. The receipts are stated to be (33) "thydes and all costs quit," one third of the offerings in early times having gone to Rome. In 1480 (25) "all manner of pardons were annulled for a time by reason of the Indulgence of St. John of Jerusalem." The Knights of St. John were besieged at Rhodes by Mahomet II., their situation was so urgent that a special effort had to be made by the Pope on their behalf, and other bulls were temporarily suspended. Only the amount of wax actually used or "wasted" is charged for at these times.

Gifts and bequests were made to the church either in money or in kind. They were sometimes made with the object of having the donor's name put on the bede roll (13), at others they seem to have been a continuation of the old corse presents taken by the priest, a form of heriot for neglected personal tithes. Some of the articles bequeathed are very curious, but at a time when money was extremely scarce it was often the only way in which a soulscot could be paid. A murray (or mulberry coloured) gown furred, a cloth of stamen (tammy), a simple gown, a brass pot, a brass maselin (mortar), an oak coffer, broken silver, spoons, rings, and jewels are among the articles bequeathed; live stock such as bees and sheep are sometimes included. The bede roll gifts were often for such a consideration as this—to set the names of the donor, of his two deceased wives, and of his and their fathers and mothers, in the bede roll, so that when the parish priest rehearsed it from the pulpit the people there present might pray for their souls. Money to buy articles for the church or vestments for the priest was often given and the consideration was sometimes for a month's mind, six months' mind, year's mind, or for perpetual obits. By the canon 84 of 1603 the parson is to urge men when they make their testament to leave some contribution to the alms chest. The capital sum of Pearce's legacy of £5 for the poor was used (p. 197) for repairing the church and interest at 8 per cent. paid to the alms box by the churchwardens for its use.

Scotale, King ale and King plays appear to have afforded a certain revenue from 1461 to 1497. There is no mention of the locality in which the Scotale House or Taphouse was situated, but it was constantly kept in repair. A small street near the Church is still called Scott Lane, and this may possibly be an abbreviation of Scotale Lane, although the usual explanation given is that it was the quarter of the Scottish Masons engaged in building the Cathedral.

There is no purchase of malt for brewing, nor any revenue derived from the loan of brewing vessels, it is therefore probable that the ale for the Taphouse was bought ready brewed and sold at a profit. In 1487 William Kensington left a certain amount of malt to the churches of Stapleford and South Newton which apparently brewed their ales, but to St. Edmund's he left 6s. 8d. for church works, and 20s. each to the Altars of Jesus and Holy Cross. The ale for the maundy is specially stated to have been bought by the covill from William Gryster and others.

The King ales were held on the weeks before and after Pentecost and at the Translation of St. Edmund. For each week one male and one female collector was appointed to preside, and any one who failed to preside (regnare) in his turn was fined 8d. Even the Deacon was not excused without paying his fine. Ales were the great social gatherings of the parish, when all classes met together; whenever the church proclaimed a holiday it opened for the servant his master's door, at a time when a servant was often practically a bondman. An ale was the principal means employed in raising money for any extraordinary demand. In 1461 the scotale, diversis jocalibus regibus et reginis, produced £23 8s. 10d., equal to nearly £300 at the present time. In Corpus Christi week 9s. 10d. is charged for the players' apparel and properties such as chevrons or perukes of kid and hair, tow for hair, fustian, tinfoil, 34 dozen signa jocalis, writing the inscriptions, pix to collect the money, the hire of a woollen shroud, &c.

The clerk's ales lasted until 1651 at St. Thomas' and 1697 at St. Edmund's, and when they were abolished both the clerk and sexton claimed compensation for the loss of income sustained.

In 1490 the word "King" is erased and the representations then given "alys plaies" were probably mysteries or miracle plays usually performed in summer in the choir. The mummers, who were musicians belonging to the corporation, generally formed the orchestra on these occasions.

Among the receipts at St. Edmund's from 1499 until 1581 are the collections for church works at Hocktyde or "feast of Hokkes" a fortnight after Easter; it was usual then to stop passengers with great merriment by drawing a rope across the road and to refuse to let them go without a small ransom. In this way money was obtained "from diverse wiffes and maydens to save them from byndynge in Hok Tuysday," "ad custodiendum illas a ligacione." I have failed to observe that it was the custom here for the men to stop the women on one particular day, and the women the men on another; it is probable that during some part of the day each had their turn; and the churchmen and the women appear to have gathered and brought in something "of the devotion of the people" ad fabricam ecclesiae. The Churchwardens paid 13s. 4d. in drinks for the men and women that gathered at Hocktyde, and the women apparently had occasionally a dinner (57).

At St. Thomas's there is a common entry for "the gatherings at Hoktyde and on Frick Friday and this sum is received by the hands of our wives and for the gatherings of the sons and daughters, and of the servants."

Gatherings were also made and money received by the Churchwardens for dancing, at Whitsuntide and at the May-pole dances. Occasionally these dances took place within the church and in 1490 there is a charge for cleaning the church at the 'daunce of powles;' a sum is also paid at another time for "a pce of Tymber for a ymner grounselle of Powlis Daunce" (40). The Beden or Birch pole used at these daunces probably gave its name to Beden Row running at one side of the Litton. There were also Children's dances and wives' dances until about 1613, from all of which a sum "was gotten to the profit of the church."

In the Gangweek or Rogation week there were ceremonial processions like the Roman Terminalia for the purpose of offering up litanies, or rogations for a blessing on the crops, and also for 'beating the bounds.'

It was a season of social concourse well described by George Herbert,* cakes and ale were distributed to the parishioners making the perambulation, and one parish received the visits of another. The ringers and banner bearers (29) of St. Edmund's were paid for bringing in St. Thomas's procession on the second day of Rogation week; John Goode the Armorer charged for clensynge of Seynte George Harnys and Stroud for setting it on. The waits (63) were paid for bringing in the procession and the ringers received money bread and drink "in alle the Rogacione Weke and afterwarde in Holy dais seil Whitsontide, Trynyte Sondag, and Corpus Xpi day," or as it is elsewhere put on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in Cross week, on the procession day, and on Corpus Christi day.

Receipts from Holy Water do not appear to have belonged to the parish, but between 1534 and 1540 at St. Edmund's, and at St. Thomas in 1547, sums are entered as received from this source. It is probable from a note in 1540 that it was "the deacon's half," to which these entries referred, and that these occasional sums were only received when the deacon's office was vacant.

Holy Loaf or holy cake was the continuation of the Eulogiae, or gifts of blessed (not consecrated) bread. It was usually baked along with the wafers at the Church House, but I have not observed any entries of obley irons, or flour, nor any evidence as to where the holy bread was baked. The bread is charged for, as also cakes on Ascension day (349) and Good Friday, and bread on Palm Sunday (73). The panis sanctificatus when distributed to the congregation was carried round "in uno coffane" (58) and the collection was made at the same time. The first notice at St. Edmund's of the Holy cake as a receipt is in 1535, and a few years later it is stated that the deacon received "a like sum." It was the practice for the priest and the churchwardens to divide the cost of the elements. When the Holy loaf cantell is discontinued in 1587 a sum of similar amount appears until 1641 as "bread and wine." Holy cake continues at St. Thomas's from 1547 to 1561, when a sum is entered "instead of holy cake money." In 1580 it became "Communion money" or "Communion bread money," and was collected by a cantell book from districts usually described as the checker or street-block in which a certain inn was situated (214). The amount paid by each was a halfpenny, and 8d. was collected by the Clerk each week, going through the families in the cantell book in turn. "Casualties" as has been said were sums received from communicants whose names were not in the cantell book. There was also an offertory after the celebration and in 1628 it was ordained that the bread and wine were to be paid for out of the ancient payment of the halfpence, and if that were insufficient out of the money collected after the communion. In 1633 a rate was ordered to be made throughout the parish for bread and wine for the communion, and the holy loaf to cease.

In 1699 "clerk's groats" are mentioned as a form of Easter dues.

The Quarter-book or "Easter Book" was begun in 1560 when the gatherings for the fabric and church works became insufficient. Special rates of a 3, 10, 12, or 20 years' rate were sometimes made for extraordinary repairs, and any neglect to pay was met by the parator summoning and the beadle distraining. The Easter Book was the continuation of the font taper and paschal collections.

Banns, Weddings, Churchings, and Christenings were all sources of income to the churchwardens. In the St. Thomas's Accounts in 1547 Holy Cake and Banns form a common item, which the Deacon shared. At St. Edmund's when knells disappeared in 1557, burials and christenings were entered as a receipt; and a register of weddings, christenings, and burials began to be kept, to which in 1560 Banns were added. These fees seem to have been collected by the clerk or sexton (125—7). A new register of christenings and burials was begun at St. Thomas's in 1569 and the old one copied into it. The fees for christenings are sometimes (141) called "christening pence." In 1611 "Wedding offerings" appear, and this is preceded by a note to the effect that xii^d in the pound should be for the use and benefit of the church, and if this were so the offerings themselves seem to have varied from £1 10s. to £4. When the new organs were being built the churchwardens used to appeal at weddings for help, and often received an offering; "William Bedy'n's jorneyman, for his maredge 4d" is credited to the organ.

At page 104 will be found a note that the junior churchwarden owed the church 7s. for 28 crysoms. The crysom was a fine white linen vestment provided by the parent and put on the child at baptism. It was worn for seven days and at the churching was presented to the priest and apparently sold again for the benefit of the church. At St. Thomas's in 1561 the crysoms were farmed out by the year. Money offerings were made at the purification of women.

Until the time of Henry VIII. there was a charge for the Forthfare bell which was rung for those "in extremis," as the soul was "passing" out on its journey, tempore exitus animae, tempore expirationum. It served not only to summon the priest to administer the last offices of the Church, but also to invite the intercessory prayers of the faithful.

Knells were rung after death and unlike the passing bell were rung for those beyond as well as within the parish. Entries occur of the knells of "my lord Bishop" who died at Ramsbury in 1524 and of Lady Pembroke in 1549. Knells were paid for according to their duration and a 7 or 15 hours knell must have been a troublesome expression of grief to those who lived near. The canons in that behalf made limited knells (1636), and the sexton was ordered not to ring any knell above the space of an hour, and, 'if after monition he should eftsoons offend therein,' he was to be removed from his place of Sexton. In two years he appears to have forgotten and offended again, his wages for the next quarter were stopped, "and if this admonition and punishment shall not amend him but that he transgress in the like manner, it is ordered that he lose and be put out of his Sexton's place." Forthfares and knells had been forbidden by the Injunctions of Bishop Hooper in 1551, but a hundred years later the practice continued and the sexton had 6d. for "passing the great bell one hour."

Fees were paid for the hire of ornaments at funerals (42), the best or the second best (57) cross, candlesticks, and pall, or the hearse cloth for the day of burying; and when there was a sermon 6d. was charged "for laying the pulpit cloth." In 1484 the great candlesticks of tree, made and ordained to stand about the sepulture of dead people within the church, were lent in the same way. There was also a hearse and black altar. The brauderer was paid (51) for making a blak worstede cope. There were fees for the bells at burials, as well as at death, for forthfares and knells (102), and these varied according to the number of bells and number of hours rung. The fees for the bells were appor-tioned among the churchwardens, minster, clerk, and ringers, according to an arrangement agreed upon (194).

The mortuary fees belonged to the church and varied with the position of the grave inside or outside the church. When St. Edmund's was reconstructed the portions of the churchyard within the old foundations were still charged for as "within the old church." At first bodies were not "cheded," and an extra charge was made when a coffin was used. Fees (surplice fees) were payable to the minister and clerk, and in 1651 a further charge occurs for registration in the Record of the people buried, the fee was 4d., and 3s. 4d. will be found charged for writing the Registers (225). The fees for tombstones were in addition to the usual mortuary fees, and old stones were apparently resold by the churchwardens: inscriptions had to be sanctioned by "the churchwardens or gentlemen of the vestry," and in 1549 a fine of 40s. was inflicted for engraving an inscription without permission.

Some of the fees were very small (95), for burying a poor child 1½d. and for burying a stillborn child the charge was 1d. The question whether the Rector could bury his daughter within the chancel without the payment of the usual fees to the church, will be found discussed (329).

Sometimes parishioners expressed a wish to be buried at their own pew door or near a special altar: William Chapman was laid in front of the altar of St. Julian the Confessor, and the mother of the wax-chandler in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin.

The amount of the burial fees in any one account affords some index to the health of the year. When the plague or sweating sickness swept over the city the burial fees were more than doubled, although fields were rented outside the parish in which the dead were buried.

In 1579 the Mayor was elected at St. Thomas's, instead of St. Edmund's Church as usual, because the plague was then "hot" around St. Edmund's. In one of the plague years 2d. was charged on 17th October "for frankumsens to burne in the churche agaynst ye masters came to chose Master Mayre." Rosemary and bay, (333), sweet woods, (299), and juniper were bought from time to time, and in a church in which uncoffined bodies were constantly buried, their use was probably of a sanitary as well as ceremonial character.

No special charge appears to have been made for the Bier or the Shrouding Board. At first the only coffin used was that upon the bier; over this the pall was thrown and the body was buried in the shroud. The word coffin as we have seen is used elsewhere for the basket in which the holy loaf was handed round; and the receptacle on the bier is sometimes called a cradle, chest, case, or coffin. In 1588 the churchwardens paid for a shroud and the burial of a poor soldier, but no coffin is mentioned. The same occurs also in 1644. In this year the registration of births as well as baptisms, marriages, and burials, was ordered by the Directory, and the fee was xii^d. When civil marriages began to be recognised a lay register came into force in 1653. Just as the earlier registers which were of baptisms came to be registers of births, so the registers of burials passed into registers of deaths. In 1677 a Register book of Parchment was got for inserting the names of those "buried in woollen," and the Act of Parliament (1666) regulating this new register was bought. This curious Act was only repealed in 1814, although it had long fallen into disuse. It professed to be an Act to prevent the exportation of money for the buying of linen abroad, and it ordained that no person should be buried in any shirt, shift, or sheet of flax, hemp, silk, hair, gold, or silver, or in anything other than sheep's wool only; even the quilling of the coffin had to be of woollen stuff. As this provision was evaded an affidavit that the Act had been complied with was, in 1678, insisted on, and had to be registered by the clergyman within eight days. After the burial service the Clerk was wont to call out, "Who maketh affidavit?" whereupon some relative made oath and the fact was noted in the register. The fine for contravening the Act was £5, of which half went to the poor of the parish.

The Bier was kept in the Bierhouse or casula pro libitiná which at St. Thomas's was close to the Belfry, and was altered in 1620 into a house for the Sexton.

From the earliest period in these accounts the parishioners appear to have been in the habit of paying for being "Serten of seats," "assertys of segys," for (1456) "seats assigned," "dimissiones sive conductiones sedum." The fines paid secured this certainty of a seat sometimes for life and at other times for a fixed period. A fine was also paid on changing a pew; seats did not go with houses. It was the "ancient use and custom" that on the death of a man or his wife the seat reverted to the church and had to be recompounded for, for the benefit of the church. When the nave of the church of St. Edmund's was pulled down and the choir reconstructed in 1653, the seats were all assigned afresh. There seems to be no distinct instance of a pew having being sold, money was sometimes paid "for the ground the pew stood upon," but this was only for the lives of the builder, his wife and children. In 1657 permission was given to build a gallery over the great west door, the builder to have the seats for 17 years, but five years afterwards the bishop ordered it to be removed and the font replaced there in a decent manner. Absentees from the city lost their right to have a seat reserved and could only hire one quarterly. The Mayor, the 24 Aldermen, and the 48 Councillors had certain pews reserved for them in every church by "ancient custom," and when sworn into the 24 the new alderman had to surrender his old seat in church for the alderman's pew or ancientests seat, and his wife had to give up hers and go with the alderwomen or "mistresses" who sat behind the aldermen. They had to pay the tax for these seats just as in other parts of the church. The ex-Mayor at St. Thomas's had a special seat before he returned to the 24 (315). Behind the councillors sat the sons and daughters of the 24 and 48 and "other children of the better sort" whose fathers paid for them the sums fixed by the vestry. The Bishop had a seat at St. Thomas's. The Taverners, Weavers, and certain trade guilds had seats at St. Edmund's, the Tailors had a bench at St. Thomas's in which the Warden sat in front and the others were placed behind by the Churchwardens. The midwives had in both churches a seat close to the font. When in Presbyterian times the font was removed to a place "convenient to the minister's seat" the midwives seat followed it, and when the font was restored, their pew was also put back to its former situation, and the pew "that used to be the midwife's" was let. By Shaxton's Injunctions in 1538 it was enjoined that parishioners and especially the midwives should be taught the essential forms of lay baptism in case of necessity.

There were pews called the "wyffe's pews" or "wermen's seats," and it seems probable that the men and women sat apart. The pews were numbered (315) and a register kept; the seats for those in receipt of relief were marked in great red letters, "for the poor," and their week's pay was kept back if they did not attend. Among the names to whom seats were assigned will be found some curious examples of early surnames. Besides the usual trade or occupation names, such as Gaston Quarrier, Christopher Pewterer, John Helyer, Kettle the Plummer, Bartlymer Glover, Batten the Joiner, Purnel Sumner, or Margery Silkwoman, we have some curious descriptive titles given, as "Mother midwife's husband," "The goodwife's daughter of the Blue Boar," "The hair maker's wife," "The foyster in the Market Place," "The crossbow-maker," "William a lawne," "Richard by the wood," "a woman under the clock," "The Northern man in Castle Street," "a sherman's wife at Fisherton Bridge." A 'grocer' is mentioned in 1649. In 1456 we find an instance of a double Christian name, John William Touker.

The pews had doors hung with "twistes," then with "gemowes," and later with "hengists," showing the evolution of the hinge from a twist, or twisted wire and hook, to a gemellus of twin pieces, and lastly to the present hinge. The pews were also locked, some had cupboards with locks, and three women were appointed to open the seat doors. In 1651 unlet seats were ordered to be nailed up.

In 1622 the St. Edmund's seats were made narrower so as to get a larger number in, and moveable or flap seats were often placed against the pew doors for children or servants. In 1637 portable seats in the aisles were let to the youths of the parish. At one time it was considered a great privilege to have a seat near the pulpit, "and if the pulpit were moved those prejudiced were to be satisfied, or have their money returned."

The Mayors ordered the churchwardens from time to time to cover their pews in a becoming manner, and charges appear at St. Edmund's for green kersey at 2s. 6d. a yard, for stuffing, bumpas, inkle and nails; and at St. Thomas's for Mockadowe, an imitation velvet common in Queen Elizabeth's time, and for Sayes, Buckerom, parchment and lace.* The aldermen's pew was covered with green baize, and there are charges for mats for the pews and a butt for the clerk. There were rests, or crooks and loops, for the maces and a frame for the swords (233) on the Mayor's pew, which had his arms "flourished" on it. Occasionally the chantry chapels were let as pews (292, 308).

No one presumed to sit except where he was placed, if he did he was fined 2s. each time, and those who had not provided themselves with pews were occasionally warned to do so. At a time when church attendance was compulsory it would have been impossible for the "three discrete persons named by the ordinary" to see that the parishioners were present, unless they sat in their own pews. In 1667 the sidesmen and churchwardens had to report absentees to the Justices of the Peace at their monthly meetings (339). Although the intention was to compel parishioners to compound for their seats the sexton was nevertheless ordered to be "careful of strangers that come to hear, and direct them to any seats void when the sermon begins, that strangers may know the respect the parish do bear towards them."

The chief arrangement of the pews may easily be made out from pages 169, 230 and 232, where however the mayor's position seems peculiar, for it is said that "the West seate of the frontispiece is to bee the Maiors seate, and to bee for the Aldermens wives, and the three seates behind to be for women only."

There is a charge for boards for lights before the pews.

Forensical receipts form an item in many of the accounts and include such sums as the hire of the vestments of the church by private chaplains engaged in performing masses for the dead; the fees received while the sexton's office was vacant; and the rents paid at St. Edmund's fair by cheesesellers, butchers, tanners, and other craftsmen for stalls and standings in the litton, within the wall of the churchyard and without. A sum was also received from three persons for pollution of the litton, an act which involved a journey to Wells for the Suffragan to reconsecrate it.

The sale of divers things is a frequent item and includes things either found in the church such as bead-stones and a "dandy plate" (dandiprat, a small coin), or things bequeathed to the church from time to time; but occasionally, it is to be regretted, we find old brass, pewter and marble stones sold to be used afresh.

After the visitations in the time of Edward VI. and Elizabeth an enormous amount of church goods was sold. On pages 91 and 110 will be found the sale of the altars and the cost of pulling them down and carrying out the rubble, the sale of skobs, nealing box of lead, banners of St. Nicholas and St. Eustace, the rood cloth, holy water pot, lamp, pyx, crosses, vestments, &c., belonging to St. Edmund's; and on pages 275 and 283—7 will be found the sale at St. Thomas's of brass which was upon graves, and tombs of brass, lavers, vestments, bells, holy water pot, brazen stick, crewetes, &c. Occasional receipts were the Rents from tenements and gardens, and interest on loans. Interest in 1541 was 10 per cent., in 1633 8 per cent., and in 1657 it had fallen to 6 per cent. The tenements had been granted for obits, and in consequence disappear from the accounts at the Reformation.

Payments.

The earliest payment is connected with the Maundy or Mandatum Novum. The accounts of the wardens of St. Edmund's Church and of Jesus Mass were made up annually on Shere Thursday, in die parasceues. They paid a scribe for "intitulating" them in their Journal Book, and engrossing them on a vellum roll. "Bread ale and vytaille" were provided for the accountants, white ashen cups or maundy dishes were bought, and 2 dozen crewses hired (63). There is no distinct mention of maunds being given away by the parish, but in 1562 the priest contributed 3s. 4d. towards the maundy. The large quantity of ale usually bought was not all consumed "in cena domini," but the masters of the parish appear to have drunk "the reversion of the Maundy ale" afterwards, a penny being charged for the bread pro magistris parochiæ qui biberunt reversionem cerevisiæ de le maundy in die pasche et in septimana ejusdem (55). The wardens had a dinner or breakfast "after the old custom" on Easter day, at which the traditional dish was "caluishede cum le hengysse" (calves' heads, heart, liver, and lights), eggs, mayngates (manchets), and cakes, bread, cheese, and a flagon of wine. The henge is still the word used in Wiltshire to describe the liver and lights of an animal. Although this diet was somewhat Spartan in its simplicity, yet I am afraid that the Blacke Soope charged on 276 was not the genuine Spartan article, but a common alkaline detergent.

Repairs.

The churchwardens' principal duty was to keep the fabric of the church with its goods and ornaments in repair, and to preserve the churchyard in decent order. In St. Edmund's that portion of the chancel which extended from the cross in the pavement to the east end of the choir, and the aisles at the end of the choir (180) were repaired by the parish. There does not seem ever to have been a separate rate made for the fabric and for the chattels of the church.

The original church of St. Edmund's was 176 feet in length; the nave was 78 feet and had six arches; the choir was the same length and had five arches. The present church consists of the choir with a modern chancel; the destruction of the old nave when the tower fell will be found described at page 228. There was also a transept or North and South cross aisle; and the Lady Chapel occupied the South, and St. John Baptist's Chapel the North side aisles of the choir.

Choir.—From these accounts we learn that there was a triple roof over the choir with its side chapels, which was at one time tiled and at another covered with "slates of stone from Chilmark." There were lead gutters between the divisions of the roof, and these were reached by "gutter doors" (212). On the East end was a vane. The roof within was ceiled and there were three lattices to keep out the pigeons. In the East end was the great window which required to be "settled" by the Freemason in 1624. A portion of the chancel was cut off by a moveable wainscot to make a retiring room for the preacher before and after the sermon, and this was used at one time as a vestry and school-room. The West end of the choir was separated from the nave by a rood-loft, screen, and doors. Besides this the North rood-loft in the North cross aisle, was at first a rood-beam, but later a loft with sperys or screen on a stone base (15). The rood altar was used by the Morrow Mass priest (27), who had a skob near it to hold his portuoise.

Within the choir was the High Altar of St. Edmund, which had a table with a canopy over it hanging by a pulley and a "vyse de assumptione sub le canopy ad summam altare," probably for access when relics were exposed. There was a painted lenten cross (100) to be used when the crucifix was placed in the sepulchre.

In front of the high altar was a stone step (27) covered with 'Dornyk' for the priest to kneel on. A table also stood by the high altar (91), and there was another for the deacon and subdeacon.

The parochial altar was apparently placed (40) on the South side of the choir, with "a grayle lyenge daily before ye parisshe preste."

A chest "that was the poor man's box" stood in the chancel to hold the great books (120), but was taken up to the vestry and (169) a bound wooden chest brought down instead.

In the choir stood also the 'great chair,' which was of some size, for it was mended with 13 feet of board and rings of iron. There was also a 'great chair' at the Altar of our Lady, and it is probable that these were used as 'pardon chairs' for confession 'in sight of the people.' There is no mention of shryving pews, shryving houses, or confessionals of any kind other than these.

At the junction of the choir and transept was a picture of St. Gregory with his three crowns. In 1538 a painter was paid 2d. for "putting out his three crowns," and at the same time his triple crown was removed from another tablement in the church.

The Tower stood between the choir and the nave, the transept or cross aisle passing "under the belfry from the south to the north door." Apparently when the tower began to sink in 1623 the choir roof slipped away from the tower, and a carpenter was brought from Devizes to give his opinion; the East part of the choir meantime (176) was bolted up with 'treest' and hooks, and the roof supported with oak props. The carpenter undertook to repair it at 3s. a perch, payable every Saturday night.

Within the choir on its North side was erected the Sepulchre, dressed in Holy Week and watched till Easter Day. All the charges for the sepulchre, staples, posts, pins of ash and beech for the lights, masons' and painters' charges for fitting it up, and watchers for watching, or "keynyge of the quyver door a nester day" (110), will be found in each pre-reformation account.

Mats were (1594) provided for communicants to kneel on, in 1626 'furmes' for them to kneel at in the choir, and later a chancel rail and two short forms. A piece of wainscot (200) used to lie on the communion table "to save the cloth." The choir was paved with square bricks (202), but the sexton (219) had occasionally to fill up hollow places, and make it clean and level, while the practice was prevalent of burying within the church. In 1560 a painter wrote Scripture about in the church, and Moyses's tables were set at the high altar; in 1572 the Queen's arms and The Commandments were placed at the upper end of the choir; the Queen's arms were more elaborately put up twenty years later, and 6d. was paid to a pursuivaunt probably for examining the heraldic portions of the work. In 1650 the Mayor gave orders to wash out the King's arms, but at the restoration this whitewash was removed and the King's arms again "made clear."

Although writing was not so common then as now, boys appear to have been much the same, for in 1664 the churchwardens had the chancel washed to remove the names "which the boys rudely set in." They had even at that early date developed a taste for window breaking (236) and had acquired a propensity for dropping articles on worshippers' heads below, so that it was deemed prudent not to allow boys to sit in the front seat of the gallery (325).

The Tower had a belfry, bells, a clockhouse and steeple; there was a "treading wheel" that served to wind things up into the tower, a turret for the day bell, a little bell or saunse bell on the W. part outside, and a vane on the S.W. pinnacle.

There were battlements with a gutter and spout at the top of the tower, and above rose a steeple. In the construction of the steeple the staves of 33 wine pipes (367) were used to lay under the lead. There were louvre windows and weather doors in the steeple. On the top was a weather cock made by the tinker out of 21lbs. of brass.

The Belfry was approached by a stair under which the sexton kept his "necessaries belonging to the church." The floor of the belfry was made of grave stones, it had a loft and was fitted with a rail to hang the ringers' hats and cloaks on. It had after a time windows, and a door at the top of the stairs. The parishioners in 1619 granted a benevolence towards the building of the "ringinge laughte," and the good wives, maids, and young men subscribed to the painting of it. In 1622 the churchwardens at a cost of 3d. placed a box in the ringing loft for the ringers' benevolence towards the maintenance of the bells, but so far as appears by these accounts the results were not such as to recoup them for this outlay.

The Clockhouse was frequently repaired, and a dial in the church was connected by rods with it. The clock or horeloge had a peyse, rope, and roller, and above the dial was a spread eagle, which was subsequently sold (199). There was a little bell for the jack of the clockhouse.

Repairing the Bells formed one of the most constant charges in the accounts. With the exception of Henry Penker or Pynker, who cast the bells in 1494, the names of the Salisbury Bellfounders are all given by Lukis. Besides the usual numbers applied to the bells there was at St. Edmund's the name of "Walter Dawbeny" and at St. Thomas's of "Cole Taylor" given to two of the bells. There are also mentioned the great bell, the tenor bell, the little bell, the jack bell, the sexton's bell, the pancake bell, the 5 a.m. or day bell, the 6 a.m. or prayer bell, and the 7 p.m. bell, or continuation of the curfew, the little bell of the morrow mass altar and other sacring or sansom bells. The bells were cast at the founders, probably in Culver or Bell Founder street, and were drawn there on a sled. Their weight was given before and after casting, and any extra metal was paid for, or if there were any "brass remaining of the yote"* it was allowed for by the founder. The dust turnings when the bell was tuned were also sold. The great bell weighed in 1603, 2991lbs., the 5th bell 2319lbs., and the 2nd bell 1066lbs. The following parts of bells are repaired or replaced:—The frame, pillows, bolsters, chairs, bolts, locks, trussing keys, trussing nails, spraggs, and wedges; the brasses on which the gudgeons played; the the gudgeons and jennettes; the culvertail, clacks and pollets. The bell welys are repaired in 1550, but no mention is made as to the form of wheel. In 1630 it was a $\frac{3}{4}$ wheel, and was repaired with a hoop of iron by the cooper, and new stays and spokes. The stock, collar of the stock, bolts, bands, couples, strops, scrypes, staples, and cottenells, are all replaced.

The Bell-ropes, varying from 21 to 28lbs. each, stirrups, an iron crook in the belfry to hang the ropes of the bells on, boxes for the ropes to run in and a roller to keep them from fretting are all bought. When the canon of the third bell was broken off, the crown had to be bored through, and there was a clamp to hold the crown of the great bell. The clapper was attached by a bawdrick or thong of white Hungary leather which passed through the eye of the clapper and the staple of the bell; buckles for the clapper were sometimes bought, and the bawdricks grafted: the bowl of the clapper had to be repaired or altered in weight; and a new eye and stem to a clapper was on one occasion bought and warranted for a year and a day. A clapper was hired for a burial (310), but as the clapper of the great bell was broken that year, it may not have been a "clapper" carried before the bier, but one for the bell. Yolle, lard and tallow were used to lubricate the bells; and in the winter tallow candles were bought to light the belfry for the 5 a.m. and 7 p.m. ringing, "the prayer bell" ringing, as it was called at St. Thomas's.

When the bells were cast or 'hawnsed' they were raised into the tower by the treading wheel; the cable used was hired from the Cathedral, and the pulleys from Wilton.

The occasions on which the bells were rung, and for which the churchwardens paid the ringers, are many of them very curious. There was ringing 'to sermon' and on "feastifull dayes in the morning" (311); Ascension, Pentecost, the Feasts of our Lord God and Easter; also at the Christmas holidays and at Candlemas, when the candles for the year were bought and hallowed. The bells were ordered to be rung by the Mayor when any important personage passed through the town; in 1552 for the King's Grace Edward VI. on his way to Wilton, in 1576 for Elizabeth, in 1585 for the King of Portingalle, in 1605 for James I., in 1610 for the Prince of Brunswick, in 1646 when Sir Thomas Fairfax came through the town with his great guns; and in 1665 for the Tuskie Prince (Cosmo Grand Duke of Tuseany). On the other hand it was sometimes dangerous to omit ringing, the Marshal General of Lord George Goring's Army fined the churchwardens 10s. for not ringing when he passed through.

Many national events were published in this way—King Henry VIII.'s burial; Mary's accession; the anniversaries of Elizabeth's gracious reign; her escape from the Babington conspiracy; and the beheading of Mary Queen of Scots (296); the triumphing day in 1592 for the great victory against the Spaniards by the mighty hand of God (297); the triumph in Ireland in 1601; the escape of James I. 1608; Gowries' treason, commemorated on 5th August, 1609; the gunpowder treason of the papists; on the safe return of the Prince in 1622 from Spain, and again when the news came that the match was broken off between the Prince and the Infanta of Spain, the bells expressed the popular feeling of the time. Four lynkes, three staff torches and candles were provided "at the chaunge of the Queens majesties reigne of the XIIIth yeare, and seven ringers were engaged at that solemnpnitie."

Local events were also in the same way announced from the steeple; the bells were rung for the Whitsun daunce, the weavers' feast, the choosing of the Knights of the Shire in 1685, in 1585 for the race, and in 1646 on the Race day when the Earl of Pembroke's horse won the cup. The races had existed for many years, but were remodelled in 1645, when Lord Pembroke merged his Golden Bell into the Cup afterwards competed for.

The ringers it would seem were in the habit of importuning the congregation for tips "to the annoyance of the parishioners," and their salaries were raised from 12s. to 18s. on condition that they would forbear begging of any one in future. The Clerk and the Sexton were apparently given to similar practices and were ordered to retire to the vestry after the celebration, and not wait about the doors to collect money.

When St. Thomas's bells were recast in 1661 Wm. Purdew undertook "to make a verrij compleat and tunable Ringe of six bells to the note of St. Edmund's six bells or within a q'ter of a note." The chimes at St. Thomas's and the Jack required frequent repair. New rods, staff, stick and keys, hammers, vone, payzes, gynne, eyes, wires, spring, pollet, cable, and roller are charged for.

The Nave like the choir had two side aisles, with a triple roof, which was slated and ceiled. A copper lamp hung from the roof by a cord. There was a great west window, which in later times was curtained with green serge (218), and a great west door, over which a gallery, as has been said, was erected when the font was removed. The font, which still exists, is of great size, and required $\frac{1}{2}$ cwt. of lead to mend it. It was provided with a proper cover.

The south porch was secured by a vectis which could be locked, and through it entrance to the church was gained by the 'wedding door.' It was a two-storey porch with windows, and Todd the brewer was buried in it. The upper room or parvyse was the sexton's chamber, and was reached by a vyse or spiral staircase, at the top of which was a door on to the leads secured by a 'hanging' lock, while the door at the bottom of the stair had a 'stock' lock, and the church door had in 1478 a 'padlock and thruste bar,' another had a frog lock, hasps and staples, and the vestry a 'hart lock' (323). Over the wedding door was a gallery for the Free School (1636), and there was a draught screen or "paling ex utraque parte portici ecclesiae," with doors in it that locked.

The Holy water stoup stood near the South door, and the bucket for filling it required frequent hooping and repair. The aisles were paved with tombstones.

There was at St. Edmund's a "dexe to read the litanie upon." The pulpit used to be the place from which the parish priest rehearsed the bede-roll, but when preachers were established in every parish, and when, at the expense of ceremonial, preaching took a more important place in the service, the pulpit was (1598) enlarged, and had a tester, canopy, and valence; it had also a cushion stuffed with flocks, fringed and tasseled, and a pulpit cloth which in 1651 was considered by some of the congregation to be of an offensive colour, and was forborne to be laid. There was an hour glass standing in an iron frame on the bible-desk.

At St. Thomas's a Litany desk was put up in 1569; but the word desk was also used for the stool the Priest knelt upon. A Lecture seat is mentioned. A "powlpete choching" was here too an important piece of furniture; it was covered with satin and a board had to be put on the pulpit to support it. There was a 'top' to the pulpit, which was carried in 1629 to our Lady Church. In 1602 the proclamation and table were written up beside the pulpit.

At St. Edmund's the nave had to be strengthened by three buttresses, which were put up by contract by Thomas Foot the freemason; he did his work honestly, but it proved a 'hard bargain,' and the churchwardens allowed him £3 more. When the tower fell the whole nave was pulled down.

The walls were pargetted, and outside they were defended 'from weather inconvenient' by casting and strawing on them rubrich from the lime pits, or as it is termed at St. Thomas's by 'rowcasting.' A cement was used of lime, sand, and smith's dust for soddering the font stone, and the church was pointed with plaster of Paris, which was always freshly burned with coals before use.

The Nave had chapels, altars, and lights, the chapels being separated from the body of the church by a perclose.

Organs.—A pair of organs is spoken of in the same way as a pair of bellows, and the earliest mention of the organs at St. Edmund's occurs in 1475. It is probable that this organ consisted of a single row of pipes, and that it was used chiefly to pitch the notes and keep the singers in tune; consequently we have no record of any organist being employed, and it is certain that it must have been a very simple instrument, since the repairs "at divers times" only amounted to 10d.

In 1517 new organs were built at a cost of £16, and fifty years later a still more ambitious instrument was constructed. When postage was unknown it was usual to send horse messengers to Bristol (68), Taunton (69), Winchester (148), Hindon (72), Andover (112), Chilmark (112), London or wherever the business of the parish required. On this occasion a horse messenger was paid 5s. to carry a letter to Hugh Chaplington, the organ maker of South Molton (75), inviting him to build an organ, which he agreed to do and received xii^d as an earnest. He began the work on August 22nd, 1567, and finished it on November 6th of the same year. The various parts were all made on the spot, and the number of white wine casks to make the pipes, the quantity of elm board for the bellows, syllinge board, wainscote, of lead, tin, tin-glass, Jean-fustyan, pamphyllon, Hungary leather, calves' skins, sheep's skins, glue, brown paper, wire, pack thread, nails, &c., are all given at page 113, as are also the sums paid for bice, gold, synyper lake, brusell, and other colours used in its decoration. The builder received for making this organ a fee of £12, and 20s. more was ordered by the masters to be paid him as a reward; the materials cost £22 12s. 10d. For this great organ it was necessary to appoint a professional organist, and Thomas "Blewatt" was engaged at a salary of £8, and a seat was erected and surrounded by curtains on which "Bluet" might sit and play.

The "little organs" were not got rid of when this new organ was built, but were still kept in repair.

The organ of St. Edmund's is not without some degree of interest in the history of music—was the nephew of the Rector of St. Edmund's.

In 1568 St. Thomas' Church had a similar organ built by the same builder at almost the same cost, £35 5s. 6d. When a later organ was built for this church in 1738 a Musical Meeting, and an Ordinary attended by 100 gentlemen, was held at the Mitre (353)—a device for raising the money (£230) in which we may trace the germ of the modern hospital or charity dinner.

The Vestry of St. Edmund's appears to have been adapted from the Chapel of St. Catherine, at least the altar in the vestry was pulled down (99). It was a two-storey building, the upper floor being the Treasury House or High Vestry, which was strewn with rushes. The coffer for the registry books was kept here, and like all coffers that the church possessed with more than one lock, it was apt to require ripping open from time to time, when the rector or either of the churchwardens happened to mislay a key. Coal and Frankinsence were used to air the vestry, probably in the time of the plague. The Vestry was moved to the upper end of the choir, and the clerk was allowed to have the old vestry for a house and school. The furniture of a vestry in 1688 was a new press for ye vestments, a wainscot cubbert, six new Rushey Lether chairs, a pair of Iron dogges, a pair of tongs and fire shovel, a pair of angirons and 1 pair of brass candlesticks, a new box, a new trunk, and 2 Acts of Parliament, 1 for highways and 1 for ye poore.

There was a Storehouse in which the "loose ends of timber" and all material belonging to the church were kept. The minister in 1609 was allowed the use of part of it for a school, so that he might move his school out of the church. The walls were "braided," and when the school ceased to be kept in the storehouse the sexton was allowed to set up a loom in it. The lead which always formed an important item in church repairs was kept in the plummary, the gutters and pipes being cast on the spot. It was in "Sows and pigs," the main channel into which it was run when melted, with a row of secondary channels at each side, bearing a fanciful resemblance to a sow suckling pigs. Collections or benevolences of lead, as has been said, were sometimes made in kind for church use.

The Sexton's House adjoined the clerk's garden, into which he was allowed to make a door, in order to use the clerk's well, provided he did no prejudice to the clerk's vine or fruit trees. The house had however a garden of its own and (241) when the sexton died his widow was allowed to retain two rooms and part of the garden. At St. Thomas's Widow Jeffrey (343) for a time filled the office of sexton.

The Workhouse is mentioned in 1478, when an interclose was made in it, and repairs occur from time to time.

The churchyard, Litton, or Cymiterium was entered by a Lychgate and the way before the lychgate (363) was mended as early as 1476. A wall passed from the lychgate to the provost's gate (30), and we learn that an arched porch led into the vestry (235). A style and a whirligog (365) are mentioned, both of which had iregere or iron gear, a bolt, lock, and key. There were also a gate and 3 doors, one of which required a pillar and 3 paramades to be turned for its repair. The path to the porch was paved; the wall of the litton was built of wattle and mud (165), and carts were kept back from it by standing-posts. A ditch was dug and the earth thrown up to form a rampart around the town from city-gate to city-gate. This passed across the Greencroft and College grounds and down by the north side of the church to the river; not being a natural waterway there is a constant charge for "casting the river against the church wall" or "rydding the ditch," and for repairs to the church hatches at the lower end of the litton. The highways and water-banks in Beden Row were also frequently ordered to be repaired. Those injuring the churchyard were presented at law (241), but at one time it became the custom to drive carts and wagons through the churchyard and the cart entrance was narrowed so as only to admit a corpse (218). Among the trees planted were 16 English elms at 2s. 6d. and 3 sycamores at 3s. 'Cepis' were put round trees to defend them from cattle. Joistment cattle were a source of annoyance to the St. Edmund's Church Wardens, coming sometimes into the porch and even into the church itself. There were frequent difficulties about ownership of the churchyard, from the church property so far as it was collegiate having passed by Act of Parliament to Henry VIII.; it remained in the Crown until 7 James I., when it passed through several hands and was ultimately conveyed to the parishioners, reserving the churchyard, ditch, and wall. It will be seen that this reservation gave rise to endless suits (95) and ultimately the churchwardens determined to grant a fresh lease of the churchyard (193), empound the cattle and proceed by ejectment to try their title. Seventy years before, the Churchwardens had to pay 26s. 8d. for one of the lessee's cows that apparently escaped and died in the Pound (105).

Besides keeping the fences, gates and paths, it was the Churchwardens' duty to keep the Litton free from weeds (361) or nettles, and ale is given and money paid to men for pulling these up, weeding divers annoyances, or cleaning nolements about the church (362). At St. Thomas's, where houses adjoined, it was necessary to restrain the neighbours from making sinks and gutters in the churchyard. Even the roof was invaded, and Wool was ordered not to be dyed on the leads of the church (325).

In 1474 as has been said the Litton of St. Edmund's was polluted (18), and a messenger was sent to get the Suffragan to rehallow it.

The Churchyard of St. Thomas's Parish was closed for seven years, and the level gradually lowered by removing a "half foot kerfe" yearly, and conveying it to the Cathedral yard (352). During this period interments took place at the Cathedral.

There was a Skull house at St. Thomas's, which after the visit of the Commissioners in 1687 was ordered to be emptied and repaired.

St. Edmund's Fair was held in and around the churchyard, where stalls or standings were let to cheesemen, butchers, tanners, and divers other craftsmen. A similar fair, St. Mary's Fair, was held within the Cathedral precincts, and the nails required for the year appear to have been bought at this fair (95). These nails are usually described according to their price per 100, pro clavis vocatis threepenny nails (46), sixpenny nails, or tenpenny nails, while larger ones called "double tens" (168) were sold retail at four a penny, the price per 1000 being cheaper (93). There were also "strok nails" for the door (299). These fairs were probably survivals of the time when traders pitched their wares in churchyards, and claimed the protection of the Church to exempt them from toll and stallage due to the local authorities.

The charges for repairs at St. Thomas's are much the same as those at St. Edmund's, and from them we learn that it consisted of a Nave with a North and South Aisle, a Choir with a Lady Aisle, the Tailors Light in Swayne's Chantry in St. John's Aisle, Penruddocke Chapel, a rood beam and later a rood loft, which was taken down in 1561. There was a trendel over the porch; Moyse's tables and the Queen's Arms adorned the choir, and "Scripture was written up" in the church and porch. There were steps leading up from the nave to the choir close to the Masters' pew; the serjeants' seats were provided with a crook and loop, and mace frame, to display the insignia of office. In the east window was a representation of the Creation, from which the figure of the Father was removed by Mr. Subdean's orders. There were forms for the poor, and two seats under the wall for the charity children. There were sundials on the south and west sides of the tower, a gilded vane and a weathercock. A hole allowed the bells to be lowered through the belfry for repair. The 'sansom bell' had a 'chayne,' the other bells had ropes, and there was a hand-bell or "clapper" which was lent for burials.

Smoke-farthings, Smoke-silver, and Pentecostals are in these accounts synonymous.

A tax of 1d. on each hearth was collected from Saxon times on St. Peter's Day and sent to support the English College in Rome, hence its name Rome-scot or Peter-pence.* The share required of the diocese of Sarum in the 13th century was £7, and of this the contribution paid by St. Edmund's as "our offering at Our Lady Church, for olde custom," was 5s. 0½d., and by St. Thomas's 6s. 8d. The tax had been forbidden by Edward III., and its first occurrence in these accounts is in 1510. It was diverted from Rome by Henry VIII. in 1534, but restored by Mary in 1556. From that time onwards it will be found continued as Pentecostals. The sum collected was usually less than the amount paid, and the difference was charged in the accounts. In early times it was taken to the Cathedral by a procession, but latterly was paid to the sumner (79), subdean's man (125) or the parritor (294), by the officials of each church.

Observance and Labour.—A curious entry occurs in 1491 of a reward given among six young men doing observance and labour in the week of Christmas from the Church of St. Edmund to Our Lady Church. The reward consisted of 1d. paid for pyu'ys. 'Points and pins' were used as rewards, and were played for by children.* There are several entries of sums paid in this way to the children after the perambulations at Rogation tide. The observance may have been in connection with the creche, or the torchlight processions to the Cathedral in Christmas week held by the Mayoress and Mistresses in memory of Beauchamp.

Stipendiary noble or Priest tenth.—Under this title 6s. 8d. is paid in 1582. In many of the earlier accounts 6s. is a usual payment to the parish priest 'for the prayers of the bede roll.' In 1595 the "curattes stypendaries" are 15s. (301).

From very early times the Churchwardens appear to have taken means to guard the church and parish against loss by fire. Buckets of leather were frequently repaired and occasionally a dozen new ones were bought. As these were used at any fire in the neighbourhood they were marked so as to be easily identified afterwards. These buckets were used when Wilton House was burnt. In later times a Hydrant (iarrant) and Fire Engines were bought (349).

Clap-nets for sparrows were also kept and lent, but no head-money is paid for vermin destroyed. There were always tools to be bought and paid for every year, as well as other useful articles required for the church. Borrirs (206), handsaws, wimbells, bits, hatchets, hammers, pyaxes, and "long besomes to strike down the wevet" were constantly in demand and bought, while pulleys and large cables were borrowed either from the Cathedral or from some other church.

The rates of Wages will be seen to have increased steadily during the last four hundred years, even when allowance has been made for the difference in the value of money. In 1450 the helyer was paid 6d. a day, and this was the usual wage paid to skilled labourers, such as masons, carpenters, &c., although less was sometimes given; the man who served them received 4d., and sons or apprentices about the same. In 1550 a plumber had 1s. 3d. a day, a carpenter 10d., his prentys 8d., and his labourer 6d. In 1650 a mason's wages had risen to 1s. 4d. a day and his boy's to 10d., besides 1d. a day drink-money.

The prices of material have similarly greatly altered in the same time. In 1450 tiles were 6s. 8d. per 1000, crests 1s. 6d. a dozen, slates from Chilmark 1s. 8d. a load, tile pins 8d. a bushel, stone lime 1s. 2d. a quarter, hair 1s. 5d. a peck, lead 6s. per cwt., tin 3d. per lb., tar 1s. per gallon, glass 3d. per foot, solder 8d. per lb., glue 4d. per lb., oil 4d. a pint. Ale cost 1s. 6d. per covil. Coals (charcoal) in 1511 were 4d. a sack. In 1546 a coarse cloth called Oseon brigges cost 4d. a yard; it was made at Osnaburg and was used for a lenten veil. Three nails of Tartersaten cost xiiii^d, and this was used for mending a vestment called 'gratys' (35). A piece of Bawdekyne for making children's tenables cost 12s., and Crescloth for lining them cost 5d. an ell (37). Of Dornex, inferior Tournay damask bought for a pall, Sendal, a fine linen and silk stuff used for pyx-palls (373), Dowle, a coarse cloth made in Picardy, and Satin-a-Brydges, which came from Bruges, the prices are unfortunately not given. In 1556 sewing crewels cost 6s. per lb., ferret silk

* Herrick's Hesperides, p. 113 (1891).

1s. 3d. an ounce, Lockram, a coarse linen cloth made in Brittany, 1s. 3d. an ell; a cloth of Stamen, or tammy, cost 8s., and Flemish cloth 7d. per ell (371). A quire of Royal paper cost 10d., and Spanish iron was 1½d. per lb.

The board of the Deacon at the Saracen's Head was 1s. 7d. per week.

The first notice of standard weights and measures appears in 1587, when a proclamation and table were issued.

Nonsenches, Vails, or little extra payments entered very largely into the rewards for services of all kinds. There were nonsenches to diverse labourers (15), 2d. to the bellfounder's boy, nometes ½d. a day for the heliers, 'none metys' for the carpenters, drinks at no'thyde, and 'morning beverages.' In Wiltshire at the present time the agricultural labourer rests his horses and sits down under the hedge at mid-day to take his "nammit," or noonmeat. In the gang week the ringers and banner bearers had their ale; and so had the men and women that gathered at Hoctyde; masters in the vestry sent for wine and cake when My Lord Bishop was here first (99); for bread and cheese and ale when the steeple was pulled down; ale for the masters on the County day (98); for cakes and wine when Sir Giles gave the churchyard (208); the singing men and quyrsters of Jesus Mass (268) had figs and drink in Lent after the salve, and the clerk that sang the Gospel in Holy Week had his ale. The ringers and the clerk were on the outlook for tips on all occasions, so that they were occasionally politely requested to keep out of the way (352); the sexton and his boy had a pair of shoes; his wife and two children had black frise to make them gowns when they took great pains to keep the church and the lamp clean; the curate claimed his livery (297) and the minister "challenged" a gown or 10s. 6d. (308) when Master Mayor was not of the parish; the boy that sang in the choir had a fustian coat and pair of breeches (292), and the curate's son was similarly rewarded (295); the clerk had his "day of collection," and he stipulated that he should be allowed to choose his own day, his experience having taught him that some days were better than others; but it was not till 1665 that the Ringers had "tobacko and pipes" (240) added to the beer; and in 1667 the same luxuries were supplied "when the vestry mett" (343).

Law Expenses.—Many curious items will be found of "costis spente in the lawe." In 1523 an executor was slow to hand over "the moldes that Myllys gave to the church" (68), and consequently the Chapter Clerk had twice to be engaged as proctor for the church, for which he was paid a single fee of 3s. 4d. 8d. was charged for a copy of the testament, 4d. for sealing 'the Inibition,' 14d. for the absolucyon of John Millis, 4d. for the answer of the church, and 2s. 4d. to brynge Jono Myles before Mr. Chawncellar. The costs of the suit were 9s. 2d. Costs in the Nisi Prius Court were equally moderate (81), the return of the writ was 2s., the recording 6s. 8d., the clerk of assize 2s., the marshall 2s., the crier 1s., the clerk of assize for recording of the jury by default 2s., the crier 4d., wine at Henry Colstone's 3s. 8d., the attorney 8s. 6d., and Master Yorke 6s. 8d.

In 1551 John Beckingham illegally took down the trees in the churchyard, and the plaintiffs in the suit seem to have been the churchwardens not the rector; at least Mr. Hopper is described as our attorney, and he received a fee of 20s., but this was unfortunately for him at a time when "the shilling came to ninepence" (95).

The churchwardens always appear to have been willing to settle suits pending "by a frendlie composition if it maie be reasonable done, how-soever our title be conceyved to be good, and that we maye prevayle by suite of Lawe" (187).

The Queen's silver for the Mynister (302) in 1596 was 13s. 8d., but for the levying of what fine this was paid does not appear.

The parator summoned those who refused to pay their rates not in the civil but in the ecclesiastical courts (317), and the Bidle carried off and praised the "Strained goods" (232) of those who were "put in suit." Arresting John Mace cost 12d. (154), but we are not told why he was arrested. There were also certain petty expenses of a quasi legal character, such as red wax "for divers munymentes and evidences to be sealed."

A Herald's pursuivant received the modest fee of 6d., but the nature of the service performed is not mentioned; the 6d. paid, page 103, was probably for examining the correctness of the royal arms "flourished" in the church.

Receipts were not demanded in early times as a right, and if required there is an extra charge paid, "quittance for the subsidie 4d." (295).

Poor Relief.

After the suppression of the religious houses the voluntary contributions to the "poor man's box" were insufficient to meet the calls upon it. Parish funds were collected by a rate and "a poor book" was drawn up, containing a list of those in receipt of relief. Besides these the Justices appear in 1570 to have sent casual poor to the churchwardens who thereupon gave relief "by the Mayor's commandment," "assignment," or "allowance," and sometimes "at the entreaty" of the Rector. Among the sums thus paid occurs to "Father Coxe at his Wife's burial 3s. 4d.," in 1571, and "for the shroud and burial of a poor soldier 3s." in 1588. Distressed "Passengers" who had "passes to travel and asked relief" were constantly assisted, and their claims to compassion are duly set forth. A poor woman who was a preacher's wife, and had 13 children; an Irish gent; a poor Irish lady, Lady Traey; an Irish doctor's widow; a shipwrecked Welshman, and others who "had great loss by sea;" the Dean of York's daughter; a poor distressed man taken by the Dunkerkes; a mad gentlewoman; one Thomson sick in the small-pox and his wife near her travail; two outlandish distressed gentlemen; a poor German minister; captives redeemed from pirates, or from slavery; are among the objects of charity sent to the churchwardens.

The demands on the church funds became so serious that in 1636 an order was made that no churchwarden should give any church money out of the church stock by way of relief "either upon his own head" or by direction of any other person, but the overseers of the poor were to be recouped out of the poor box for what they had given to the poor.

Profane swearing sometimes swelled the receipts for the poor; Joseph Goddard, of West Harling, Essex, was fined £7 13s. 4d. in 1651 for this offence. In the same way money spent in customary hospitality on the signing of legal documents was sometimes given to the poor instead of being spent in "cakes and wine" (336).

Highway expenses enter systematically into the accounts from 1632, and were met by a rate in 1690, this amounted to 2d. in the £1 on the assessment of the Land Tax granted to their present Majesties. A list of surveyors was made at a parish meeting and the Mayor and Justices chose officers from it at special sessions.

Changes in the Church Services and discipline are easily traced in this volume. A pre-reformation revival is evident at the opening of these accounts, and was due to the efforts of Bishop Beauchamp to remove from the church that condition of things against which Lollardism was an active protest. One means adopted by him was the canonization of St. Osmund; for the observance of this festival on 17th July a special indulgence was granted; the History of St. Osmund was bought in 1475 and read to the people to stir them up to give oblations and avail themselves of this pardon.

In Henry VIII.'s reign the changes that took place were more political than doctrinal; the six Articles left the main points of Catholic belief untouched. The Italian Bishop of Salisbury who was intended to help Henry politically having failed him, Shaxton was appointed in 1535 to supersede Campeggio. The "Bill to the Bishop" will be found entered, and in the same account the Churchwardens did what was expected of them at a time when ready money was very scarce, and gave 2s. to the "Queen's servants" who accompanied Anne Boleyn and Henry VIII. to Salisbury. The changes most observable are the gradual substitution of the vernacular in the service, the purchase of a Bible, and "the putting out the three crowns of Pope Gregory," which were designed as blows rather directed against Roman language and Roman influence, while doctrine and ritual practically remained untouched.

With the injunctions of Edward VI. came however the evidence of a complete change of teaching; images are broken down, pictures, altars, vestments, and plate are removed; the church whitelimed; masses and obits are abolished; the former books are supplanted by an omylé book, an ordinal and the new communion book; all the old books are sent to our Lady Church; a glass and plate are bought for the communion and the communicants are seated on "forms" around the "communion board." The elements were administered in both kinds, but by whom they were supplied at this time does not appear, and the labour of celebrating (after the abolition of chantry priests) when the communicants at St. Edmund's numbered more than 1700, and at St. Thomas's 1650, must have been very severe. The expense was probably met by the Holy loaf cantell.* Later wine, and the "singing bread" or "serving bread" are charged in the accounts.

Under Mary in 1553 mass books, manuals, portys, hymnary, antiphonar, and Grayle returned for a brief period, paper and ink were bought to make a new song for the Salve, and drink was provided for the singing men who sang it on the five Sundays in Lent; the altar, the font taper, the pascal, a latten ship and holy water pot, the first mass altar, the saunce bell, cross, vestments, and sepulchre were all restored, and their cost will be found in these pages.

Then with Elizabeth came a return to the middle way of Henry VIII., the Act of Uniformity in 1559 enforced the 2nd Prayer-Book of Edward VI. "John Atkyns and a mate" carried the Latin books to our Lady Church once more, and a book of the Homilies and two little psalm books were bought. By the Injunctions each parish had to provide one copy of Udal's translation of the Paraphrases of Erasmus on the Gospel and Acts, to be placed in the nave of the church, and each clergyman had to provide another copy for his own use in the choir. The Churchwardens of St. Thomas's paid 13s. 4d. for the book, but those of St. Edmund's, rendered cautious by the frequent changes they had seen, were content to pay 18d. on two occasions "for the loan of a book called the Pharasyses."

After the dissolution of the religious houses preaching sank to a low ebb, and in the time of Edward VI. and Elizabeth, special persons were licensed as itinerant preachers, who practically took the place of the predicant friars, and were in the habit of forcing their discourses on any parish "as if they were apostles." In many of the accounts 1d. and 2d. will be found paid for "ringing to a sermon," and money is also paid to the preacher. It was not until later that a sermon came to be expected as a regular part of the service. In 1602 it was stipulated that four sermons should be preached a year, and for these the usual payment was 10s. (151, 154); while benefactors of a still later date frequently endowed a sermon. When a sermon was preached at St. Thomas's Church the St. Edmund's people apparently attended, for they adjourned their vestry "until to-morrow after evening prayer at the end of the sermon at St. Thomas's Church." Very early in the 17th century the pulpits became much enlarged, and hour glasses and cages were provided, an hour being the usual length of a sermon.

An unusual compliment will be found paid to the curate in 1725. The vestry thanked him for his sermon preached at the opening of the new Charity School, and desired that it should be printed at the charge of the parish (353).

The gradual growth of puritanism can be clearly traced until we find it culminating in the Recorder, Henry Sherfield, destroying a painted window at St. Edmund's, which gave a representation of the Father in the creation. He had received permission, if he chose, to substitute plain for stained glass, but he preferred to break the window publicly with his staff as a protest. For this he was punished by the Star Chamber, Laud, who though a disciplinarian, was strictly just, explaining that although sacred art might be within its province in depicting the humanity of Christ it could not be defended in an attempt to represent the Father, yet granting this, nothing could justify contempt. But it was a puritanical mind of the highest development which could find fault with the colour of a pulpit cloth and direct that it be "forborne to be laid, for the colour is offensive in the sight of some of the parishioners." At St. Thomas's also, as has been said, the picture of the Father in the east window was put out (294) in 1583 by Mr. Sub-dean's commandment. In 1632 the sum of 10d. was paid for "setting on the chaines to ye Bookes of Martirs."

Through the troubled period that followed we get glimpses from time to time of the struggle that was going on. Mr. Thorpe in 1638 was sent to London to retain a solicitor to defend the suit against the pastor of St. Edmund's for refusing to pay first fruits. In 1642 a system of collecting voluntary subscriptions for the pastor was adopted, but did not seem to be successful, for next year the Mayor is to take the pains to ride up to London to petition Parliament concerning some convenient way for raising of sufficient maintenance for the minister, and to obtain a power of rating. His horse hire was 12s., and he was given a free hand "to petition for anything that may conduce to the good of the church and parish."

The sympathies of the Churchwardens in the Civil War were apparently with the Parliament. When Lord Goring's army passed through the city from Portsmouth the bells were ominously silent (323), and the "Martiall Gen'all" of the army demanded 10s. for the slight; but when Sir Thomas Fairfax came through the towne with his greates gunnes (216), and again later, when the news came that the castles and forts had been delivered into the hands of the Parliament (216), the bells rang out and the ringers were paid. Between this time and the Restoration the Cathedral seems to have suffered more than the parochial churches, which received each a small augmentation from the Commissioners, and were offered facilities for acquiring their parsonages. When the Act of Uniformity was passed St. Edmund's lost its minister. Mess. Strickland did not conform and was "disabled from continuing Rector." A later rector, Dr. Daniel Whitby (244) was indicted before Judge Jeffreys, for certain pamphlets advocating toleration. Within the space of a few lines on page 349 we find, "ringing when King James came to town 10s.," "ringing when the Prince of Orange came to town 10s.," "ringing when King William was proclaimed 10s.;" and in these items we have a matter-of-fact record of the accomplishment of the Revolution.

There were certain practices connected with the celebration of the Holy Communion which seem to deserve notice, in particular the admission to communion by tokens (184). Each intending communicant on some day in the week preceding the celebration notified his intention to the clerk and received a metal token. One halfpenny was paid to the churchwardens at the time of receiving and giving back the token; these sums are entered as "halfpence for monthly communion." A steel die was bought yearly and the tokens were struck at Easter for this purpose, sometimes in brass and sometimes in lead. In 1660 those rated to the poor in St. Edmund's that could afford it were to pay 2d. when they sent to the clerk's house for their tokens, and the clerk kept a list of their names. In St. Thomas's, a man rated to the poor in 1663 had to pay for himself, wife, children, apprentices, "fit to use the sacrament," a great apiece, besides a convenient allowance for bread and wine.*

A curious practice, difficult now to realise, seems to have existed of giving a superior wine in the celebration to the masters and mistresses

* The Tokyn-girdles frequently mentioned in early accounts had nothing to do with tokens, but were "cingula" or "zonae ad vestimenta," tucking girdles for gathering the alb at the waist, and the "box to gery tokens" referred to these and not to communion tokens (374).

(288), 2s. 4d. worth of muskodel being bought for their use, and 22s. 9d. worth of claret or sack for the humbler communicants. This seems to have gone on for many years, but in 1629, with the Laudian revival in Church discipline, we find a memorandum that the churchwardens are not to provide any more claret, but muscadine only. There is no note as to whether the masters and mistresses communicated at the same hours as the parishioners generally.

It was a common custom in parishes where the communicants were very numerous to divide the district into circuits, so that the celebrant "should not be over toiled," and to take these in turn on separate Sundays; whether the circuits described here had any such purpose does not seem clear.

Visitations were periodically held by the Subdean, Bishop, and Archbishop, at which presentments were made by the Churchwardens.

No mention of Confirmation occurs.

The Subdean by his Somner summoned his synodsmen or sydemmen. Early in the 14th century twelve men worthy or confidence for St. Edmund's on St. George the Martyr's day, and fifteen for St. Thomas' parish on the Wednesday following, formed his court. To this court presentments for perjury, defamation, neglect of the offices of religion, violating the Sabbath, incontinence, or other breaches of the moral law were made, and occasionally other matters, such as the removal of "the picture of the Father in ye East window" (294) were brought before it. "Searching and viewing" the church appears to have been a necessary ceremony on these occasions (79). "Million the peritour for warning the syde men to Mr. subdene's visitacion" received 4d. (138) and 6d. was paid "for the Articles at the visitacion of the sub dene's visiting." "A bill" was prepared to be delivered to Mr. Subdean, which cost 6d. for making (129), and a fee varying from a shilling to one shilling and tenpence was paid "to the cleark for receiving our presentment," with "4d. to the parrator for giving the oath at the visitacion" (146, 148, 157).

After 1662 four sidesmen appear to have been regularly appointed.

Bishop's Visitation (165), the parator for warning the churchwardens, the prator for warning (147), or the Somner (75), for bringing his prosses (132) for the sidmen to appear at y^e Bushopes visitacion (141) 6d. A fee of 1s. 10d. on delivering up the "bill of presentment at the visitacion courte" (147) was paid to the officers who received it (165). The ringers were remembered "when my Lord Bishoppe whent his visitacion," and in the case of a new Bishop the Churchwardens spent "8d. for wyne and cake when my lord byshopp was here fyrst" (99). Latterly they charged their own personal expenses when attending visitations on a more lavish scale, but a minute was passed in 1692 giving 15s. as the maximum to be spent by the Churchwardens at one visitation (244).

The Bishop saw that the arrangements of the church were in order; he directed (1662) the seats under the East window to be removed and "the communion table with railes there decently placed," and that the font be restored at the West end, and that none but parishioners "shall have any interest in any seates."

The Archbishop's Visitation.—When my lord of Canterbury held his courte either personally or by his Vicar-General the Churchwardens paid the charges for the articles and for the officers; but here Mr. official's charges were usually higher, for the apparator of an Archbishop was a "gentleman apparator." When Laud held a visitation through Sir Nathaniel Brent, his vicar-general, 6s. 8d. was the fee of the "Gent' Apparator" (202); and 10s. was paid for "the order removeing ye Organs, and reversing that order."

Besides these usual visitations presentments were made to the Court Leet or to Special Commissioners, who occasionally held enquiries in the church, "at the George Inn" (82), or elsewhere.

In the course of these accounts there are many parts of the city named which are not now in existence. The Broad Gate, Milford Bars, and the other gates are gone, but when the organs were built 6d. was paid "for custom" at the gate. Beden or Bedredyn (53) Row was probably Bedwyn Street; Water Lane and the Dyers Bridge were in Castle Street; Endle's Street is now corrupted into Endless Street, and is almost the only street that has an end; the Guildhall was then in existence; Wynman Street was Milford Street; Winchester Street extended to Castle Street; Drakyn or Drake Hall Street is now Exeter Street, and Fisher Row is mentioned. Culver Street was also called Bellfounder Street, in 1318 it had been called Yottlebell Street; and Gygore Street is now Gigant Street. It is probable that the Workhouse was in Brown Street, which then included Rollestone Street.

Many of the old Inns have disappeared; among them the Blue Boar which still gives its name to part of the Market Place; the Three Lions, the Griffin, the Lamb in Drakyn Street, the Antelope, the Saracen's Head, the King's Head on Fisherton Bridge, the Blue Lion, the Dolphin, the Greyhound, the Maidenhead, the Mitre, and the Cornish Chough. The George Inn in High Street had a yard surrounded by galleries, which was used for the representation of stage plays.

The Churchwardens were bound to provide all things necessary for the service of the church, and many items occur which may be termed Vestry Expenses. A quire of "Ryall" paper (99) and a standish (232), pottlepots to measure the communion wine (206) and a tynnen bottle to fetch it to church, christening oil and nelyng oil (91), holly and greening at Christmas, links and great candles to light in church at the entry of the Queen's Majesty at service time and sermon (287), and innumerable similar charges may be classed in this way.

Many of these entries when they occur in the English language serve to indicate the local pronunciation at the time. A "vadome" of rope, new "reyelles for the powlpet steeres," a peeexe and shoule, the payment to the ringers that rang "thyeck" four days, or to the men who took the borrowed ladder "whom" again, the cost of "elapses" for books, and "hapses" for doors, all show that whatever else may have changed, the Wiltshire dialect is much the same to-day as it was four hundred years ago.

In conclusion, I beg to tender my grateful acknowledgments to the Lord Bishop of the Diocese for a promised Foreword of Godspeed, and to the Rev. R. H. Clutterbuck, F.S.A., Mr. E. Doran Webb, F.S.A., and others, for their kindly counsel and guidance while preparing these sheets for the press.

[The rest of this roll is the same as the one given previously [p. 44] which was supposed by Mr. Hatcher to have been of the time of Henry VI. This is evidently a rough draft and there are a few variations. The receipt of 40s. from Edward Dygon is said to be in full satisfaction of £4. W. Wync'tre's name is spelt 'Wynche', Chertor's 'Chartor,' and Edmund Benett is called E. Taillor. In the Fair perquisites 'firmitoribus' is altered to 'frimitoribus.' In the payments for the gemowe, or hinge, dependenda in parvo hostio &c. 'ponat' in parui hostii palee' and for pro emend' le stipit' &c. is "sol' ij bz hominibus pro emendac' stipit' cum meremio le quarta." Sawder is "Sowdir" rete is "rote." Tolfre is paid 15d "pro emendac' stipit' de Magna Campana." Scē Nichē is rightly given "Scī Nichī." The book for which William George provided clasps at 8d is described as "pro quodam libro vocato the gret Antifynere. There is also a curious entry erased "Et in denariis solutis pro pane & victulibus ordindandis diuersis n' [magistris] & parochianis die lune in festo Pasche vd Et—pro vna mensura Carbonis in Vigilia Pasche apud benediccionem ignis jd" The tenement purchased of J. Wexhalle, not Wexsall, is said to have been late the property of William Kensyngtone 1d is paid to Pylde not Pyle James but it is not stated for what. There are other small alterations in the grammar and spelling not always for the better. It gives however the missing conclusion

The following imperfect Accounts seem to have been written by or for Roger Wellow. His tenure of office began apparently in the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII., at the earliest, and ended sometime in the first half of that of Queen Elizabeth.

I do not find any clue to their chronological order, and print them here, though I think it is before their proper time, in consequence of Mr. Hatcher's indorsements of them.

Rychard Rudge, one of the churchwardens, appears to have died during his year of office. In the Journal Book there are two entries, both of the date of April 21, 1553. The first states that W. Lobbe & R. Rudge had made their account, and that they owed £6 & 16d. The second that Wyllyam Lobbe and John' Mylles, Church wardens, made their account, and that the said William had paid this sum which he owed for 1552. “Also of thys accompte for thys yere w^{ch} ys for the yere of o' lord' god' mcccc ffyftie and thre & of the same the owe xxxijs iijd ðb” which he also paid to John' Mylles & Thomas Belly.

[On back] "John Pearson account 1632."

The oldest Vestry book now belonging to the Parish is marked No. 3, but although there is a loose leaf with a memorandum of the passing of the Account of Mr. John Banger, April 17, 1629, it seems to be the new book which was ordered to be bought Oct. 16, 1630. The extracts which I shall give will be denoted by V. B. The first minute of Vestry is dated January 7, 1631. "fforasmuch as this Church and the Tower thereof is growen in very much decay and must of necessitie be repaired with all convenient speede, about which a greate sum' of money must be employed, and forasmuch as there is not any stocke of mony in store in the Church or in the Churchwardens handes It is Ordered that a Rate and Taxe be set and jmposed vpon all the Jnhabitantes of this Parish who are chargeable by Lawe to contribute to the saide Reparacōns And that the proporcōn is and shalbe after the Rate —of one yeres paym't as the same is taxed in the quarter booke, as hath binne aunciently vsed, But because one single Rate after that proportiō will not suffice,—a double Rate—shalbe sett—And such persones as are able and chargeable and are not in the quarter booke shalbe—Rated accordingly." Henry Biley Mayor, H. Sherfield, Bar. Tookie, J. Jvie, P. Thacher & ten others.

Jan. 15, 1632. The Churchwardens are ordered to "goe on to sett in hand early in the Springe the Reparaciōns" and offers to lend to the Church for the purpose. [See next Account.] W. B.

CORRECTIONS, &C., FROM THE JORNALL BOOK.

[1473—4] p. 14. Besides some inaccuracies of minor importance such as fontaper for fontaper, under the head of "Expenses necesfarye w^t the costes of the Stiple," awter, throughout should be auter, instead of 'led per le C' it is prec.' Line 11 read, "Jt' in the reward of j gown geuyn to the plu'mer of covenant vjs viijd" and 13, "Jt' to the same William in partye of payment of a olde dute of v marke for &c." The Seint S. omitted in the MS. is 'Su'day' [i.e. Sunday] though I have no acquaintance with that saint. 10s not 10d is the cost of the lathnails &c. read 'defautes of the glasyn' wyndows' Jt' in j rejane is 'in Jregare for the chapul dore' &c. and "It' in ij carpenters ther worching in the grete bare [or base] tymber work, &c." The gri * of the MS. is 'grees' [i.e. steps] and it is right in "the reparacion of the copys of selke and other of chesepulles albis and avbys brokyn' and of albys and avbys for children' &c." The S'ma should be "xxvj li ixs vd ob" p. 16, line 3, "Jt' in the makyng' of j pur of indents of the north Rode loft."
