

Kelly's Directory Extract 1915

Wilton

WILTON is a municipal borough, union town and parish, with stations on the South Western and Great Western railways, and is near the confluence of the rivers Nader and Wylye, 3 miles north-west from Salisbury and 86 from London, in the Southern division of the county, Branch and Dole hundred, petty sessional division of Salisbury and Amesbury, Salisbury county court district, rural deanery of Wilton, archdeaconry of Sarum and diocese of Salisbury. The town is supposed by Baxter to have been the Caer Guilo, or capital of the British prince Caroilus, and subsequently an important seat of the West Saxons; it was certainly a considerable place previous to the Norman accession: in 871 King Alfred fought a battle against the Danes, who, although ultimately successful, sued for peace here, but in 1003 Wilton was partially devastated by Sweyn, King of Denmark: in 1143 it was taken possession of by Stephen, who, however, was compelled to vacate it by the army of the Empress Matilda, by whom it was burnt; it was afterwards rebuilt; it was, in 1579, visited by Queen Elizabeth: in 1603 it was for a time the residence of the court. Wilton became the head of the diocese of Wilts early in the 10th century, but during the Episcopate of Hermannus (1058-72) it was re-united to Sherborne and the seat of the bishopric removed to Old Sarum, where it remained until its transfer in 1271 to Salisbury. The borough first sent two members to Parliament in 23rd Edward I (1293-4); by the operation of the "Reform Act of 1832" (5 and 6 Wm. IV. c. 76) the number was reduced to one, and by the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885" (48 and 49 Vict. c. 23) it lost its separate representation, and was made the head of a parliamentary division. From a very early period, prior to the reign of Henry I Wilton had been a corporate borough; it was not scheduled in the "Municipal Corporations Act. 1835," but appears in the 1st schedule of the Act of 1883 (46 and 47 Vict.) as a place to which the Commissioners of 1876 considered that the Municipal Corporations Act might be applied, and accordingly, by an Order in Council, dated May 15th, 1885, a new municipal charter was granted, under which the old corporate boundary is extended, and now includes the whole of the parish of Wilton, with parts of the parishes of Burcombe, South Newton and Fugglestone St Peter. The charter provides that the town shall consist of one ward, to be governed by a mayor, 4 aldermen and 12 councillors. The first election under the Municipal Corporations Act took place in November 1885. The town is lighted with gas from works the property of the corporation, and supplied with water from water works at Ditchampton, which have lately been considerably improved.

The parish church of SS Mary and Nicholas, was erected in 1844 by the late Lord Herbert of Lea and the Countess of Pembroke, at an expense of upwards of £40,000, is an edifice in the Romanesque style, consisting of chancel, with aisles, nave of six bays, aisles and a campanile 100 feet in height, and containing 6 bells: the floor of the sanctuary is of Italian agate and marble: the pulpit of Caen stone is supported on 16 shafts of black marble, and beautifully inlaid with mosaics brought from the church of Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome; the font is of black and variegated Italian marble: there is a monument with marble bust to Henry, 9th Earl of Pembroke, who was one of the Lords Justices (Regents of the Realm) 1740-48, and also held various offices in the household of George II: he died 9 Jan 1749-50: there are also monuments with two recumbent figures in white marble to Catherine, Countess of Pembroke, d. 27 March, 1856, and to the Rt Hon Sidney, 1st baron Herbert of Lea P.C. Sec. of State for War, 1859-61, d. 2 Aug 1861: the organ was presented by the 13th Earl of Pembroke: the windows are all stained: there are sittings for 800 persons. The register dates from the year 1615. The living is a rectory, with Ditchampton and Netherhampton annexed, joint net income £254, with 10 acres of glebe land and residence, in the gift of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, and held since 1913 by the Rev Guy Ronald Campbell MA of New College, Oxford, and chaplain to the Earl of Pembroke. The Congregational chapel, founded in 1700, seats 473; the Primitive Methodist, 150; and Wesleyan 90. In 1891 a cemetery, with lodge, was provided by the Wilton Town Council, on the Ugford road, the ground comprising about 2 acres, given by the 13th Earl of Pembroke.

Charities: R Sumption esq. left £4,000 in aid of the Free School; £1,000 for the clothing and apprenticing of poor children; £1,000 as a marriage portion for poor young women, natives of the town, not to exceed £10 to each; and £2,000 toward the clothing and support of five women above the age of 50, being residents of the place for seven years previously. James Rawlence esq. of Bulbridge, gave £1,000 for the endowment of a trained nurse for the poor. There are also many other charities in aid of the school and for distribution.

Wilton is noted as the first place in England where carpets were manufactured. The Wilton Royal Carpet Factory Company Limited, now under the chairmanship of the Earl of Radnor, have a large factory here, where handtufted Axminster carpets of the finest quality are woven, as well as super qualities in Wilton pile and Brussels carpets.

Fairs are held on the 4th of May, for horses, and on September 12th for cattle and sheep, when between 60,000 and 100,000 are generally penned, this being one of the largest fairs of the kind in the west of England.

Wilton was at a very remote period the seat of a monastery; Wulstan, Earl of Wiltshire, is said to have commenced this foundation by the erection of an oratory in AD 800; thirty years after his death Elburga, his widow, succeeded in raising this oratory into a priory: King Alfred, after his defeat of the Danes, erected a nunnery here in 871, which he subsequently transferred to the sisters of the priory, and this house King Stephen fortified in 1143. Æditha, daughter of Earl Godwin, and wife of Edward the Confessor, was educated here, and Maud, queen of Henry I passed her early days at Romsey Abbey and at this house. At the Dissolution there were 32 nuns, and revenues estimated at £600.

Wilton House stands on the site of the monastery, which, with the surrounding estates, was granted by Henry VIII soon after the dissolution of the monasteries in 1539, to William, 1st Earl of Pembroke: the house was rebuilt and completed during the reign of Edward VI from the designs of Hans Holbein. Of this building only the centre of the east front remains, the greater portion having been destroyed, presumably by the fire which took place during the life of Philip 4th earl. This nobleman rebuilt the house from designs by Inigo Jones, but he, being ill at the time, the work was undertaken by his son-in-law John Webb. The south front, and all the east front, except the centre portion of Holbein's design, is Inigo Jones's work. At the end of the 18th century the north and west fronts were rebuilt, under the direction of James Wyatt. Sir Philip Sidney was a constant visitor at Wilton, and "Sir Philip Sydney's Avenue" in the Park, is shown to this day as the spot where he composed "Arcadia". In this house, the seat of Capt the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery MVO, is an extensive and beautiful collection of paintings, several of them being Vandykes, some ancient marble sculpture, and also many suits of armour, some being trophies from the battle of St Quentine, 10 Aug 1557, at which William, 1st Earl of Pembroke, commanded the English: the river Nadder flows through the grounds, and is crossed by an elegant bridge with an open Ionic colonnade; the park of 250 acres contains some fine cedars of Lebanon and a herd of deer.

St Giles' Hospital, founded in the 12th century by Adeliza, second wife of Henry I for the reception of lepers, comprises five cottages in the occupation of three brethren and two sisters, with an income of £98, which is distributed in money among the brethren and sisters. St Mary Magdalen's Hospital has an income of £145 yearly, and consists of six cottages, for six superannuated servants of Capt. the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery MVO who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Part of the tithing of Ditchampton belongs to the parish of Burcombe, but it lies contiguous to and forms part of the borough of Wilton, and is one mile east from Burcombe. The Hospital of St John, at Ditchampton, in the parish of Burcombe, was founded by Hubert, Bishop of Sarum, in 1189, for two poor men and two poor women (who receive 8s per week) and a prior, who is appointed by the Dean of Salisbury. The names of the inhabitants of Burden's Ball, which belongs to South Newton, are given here. Bulbridge is another tithing and adjoins the town.

Capt the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery MVO is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is alluvial and clay; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and green crops. The area of the parish and municipal borough is 1,886 acres of land and 29 of water; rateable value £10,549; population in 1911 2,124. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,117.

By Local Government Board Order No. 31,825, the parishes of Burcombe Within and Newton Within and part of Fugglestone were added to Wilton civil parish and municipal borough.
